DR. HUGHES AT TAMWORTH

The people of Tamworth and surrounding country enjoyed a rare treat on Friday evening, Nov. 28th, when Mr. J. Hughes, L. L. D., of Toronto, lectured for the Cadet Corps, in the Township Hall. At seven thirty the doors were opened and as the people entered the boys of the Cadet Corps, dressed in uniform, ushered them to seats and displayed their perfect training by the ease with which they performed their duties there, and at other times during the evening.

Owing to the fact that the 4.28 train on which Dr. Hughes travelled, did not arrive until eight thirty, the programme could not be started on time, but the people were entertained by different pianists and no impatience was felt or shown. The piano used on the occasion was a new Scale Williams kindly loaned by Mr. J. Hunter.

Great praise is due to the musical program which was under the direction of Miss B. Hunter, the accomplished vocalist and pianist. The opening number was a piano duet by Miss Hunter and Miss Richardson and was brilliantly rendered. It was followed by a quartette "The Boys of the old Brigade." Shortly after this Dr. Hughes entered and at once took his position on the platform amid applause.

After humorously presenting the time-honored request that the ladies remove their hats, which was courteously acceded to, Dr. Hughes entered at once into the subject of his address, "Modern Tendencies in Education." This is his favorite topic and was handled with unusual brilliancy. No one could do it so well for no one was as thoroughly in touch with it as he had taught school a number of years and then been Chief Inspector of Schools in Toronto, which position he has recently resigned. Dr. Hughes pleaded for the boy. The old definition by Froebel was his main plea: "Education is a conscious growth towards the Divine." He would give no place to examinations in a school if he could have his will. They were a crowding of subjects which were forgotten by the pupil as soon as the stress of examinations was over.

Dr. Hughes was peculiarly gifted with inimitable mimicry and could give a humorous pen-picture in a few choice words and by intonation and gesture make it very real. Among other things he spoke of Cadet work and military drill, giving as their chief value not only a well-developed body, but also they engender a love of law and order which is done by no other branch of school work. The fund provided by Lord Strathcona makes it an easy thing for any school to provide uniforms for the boys of a Cadet Corps and also provide material for the carrying on of the work.

Dr. Hughes could have talked longer to the satisfaction of those who were privileged to hear him, but time did not permit and he ended by suggesting that Tamworth buy a few acres

HISTORICAL MEETING

The regular monthly meeting Lennox and Addington Historical Society was held, in Historic last Friday evening.

After opening the meeting the president announced the death of James Daly, an Honorary President of the Society. Mr. Daly, who was son of Mercy Everett and Lewis was born in this County in 182 was elected an Honorary President May 15, 1908. He died at his home Napanee on Thursday afternoon October 2nd, 1913.

The lecturer for the evening Hon Mr. Justice Riddell, of Toronto was then introduced and for a quarter of an hour held the attention of the large audience with a most interesting talk on the War of 1812 basing his story on the diary during his imprisonment in Canada, by an American named Stephen White. White captured by the British in the west part of the Province and taken far as Montreal. During his imprisonment he kept a careful diary a comments upon the conditions of the country, the settlers, the soldiers, the methods of transportation matters that were different from his own Pennsylvania home most interesting.

In his introductory remarks Mr. Riddell gave a very careful statement of what were perhaps the real of the war and followed these a few explanations with regard to value and authentic qualities of earlier histories of the war. He told of the raids and counter made by the contestants of the western part of the Province and these to bring out a clear statement of the good and bad on both. After he captured his prisoner rest of the lecture dealt mainly the diary. At frequent intervals speaker left the narrative to some point of special local interest. The description of the "Town of castle" at Presqu'ile Point was interesting and many of those audience had never before heard existence; while his guarded comments regarding the loyalty or loyalty of some of the people in Province was most interesting.

The entire lecture was filled with historical facts and the speaker plainly understands the art of bringing these out in a clear and forcible manner while interspersing them with bits of wit that always kept interest keen.

After the lecture the President thanked Justice Riddell on behalf of the Historical Society and its friends for coming to Napanee.

The election of a Secretary-Treasurer was then held and Mr. John Robinson was the unanimous choice of the Society.

The next meeting was announced for Friday evening, December when Prof. J. L. Morison, of Queen's University, Kingston, will deliver a lecture, illustrated by lantern slides on "Social Life in Canada after Rebellion." The meeting closed with "God Save the King."

body, but also they engender a love of law and order which is done by no other branch of school work. The fund provided by Lord Strathcona makes it an easy thing for any school to provide uniforms for the boys of a Cadet Corps and also provide material for the carrying on of the work.

Dr. Hughes could have talked longer to the satisfaction of those who were privileged to hear him, but time did not permit and he ended by suggesting that Tamworth buy a few acres for a play ground for the boys and girls and furnish it suitably, in which case he would come again and give a lecture, free of charge, to help finance it. Dr. Hughes took his seat amid deafening applause given by old and young alike.

The audience was then delighted by Miss Hunter's vocal solo, "Angus McDonald." Following this was a piano solo brilliantly played by Miss Richardson. After singing "God save the King," the people dispersed, loud in their praises of Mr. Pickering and the Cadet Corps who had been instrumental in affording them so much entertainment.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
December, 1st, 1913.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor W. A. Steacy in the chair.

Present—Reeve Osborne and Councilors Alexander, Walters, Simpson, Carson and Dickinson.

The minutes of the last regular and special session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from the Public Roads and Highways Commission asking the co-operation of the Council in securing certain information which they needed. They wished to secure as accurately as possible the price charged on the market for the different products offered for sale by the farmers, as well as the retail price charged in the groceries for the same articles, and for this purpose a couple of blank forms were enclosed and the council was asked to have them filled out as nearly correct as possible and forwarded to the Commission.

Referred to the Market and Police Committee to act in accordance with the request.

A communication was received from the Sawyer Massey Co., Hamilton, stating that they had sent to the Merchants Bank, Nananee, for collection, a note which they held against the town for $540.00 and $42.75 interest to date. The above was one of the notes given for payment of road roller purchased last year by the town.

Ordered paid.

A communication was read from G. S. Decatur, Montreal. Mr. Decatur is the president of the industry which is seeking substantial inducements from the town for locating their industry here. In his communication he stated he was sorry to learn that the members of the council did not deem it advisable to submit a by-law to the ratepayers, along the terms suggested by him. He was disappointed but still hoped the council would submit a proposition which his company could consider.

Referred to a committee composed of Coun. Walters, Simpson and Graham to draft a reply to the letter.

A communication was read from C. M. Wilson, on behalf of his client, Mr. John Smith, who is asking the council to give him a roadway into his property, just west of the disposal works. Ordered filed.

A communication was read from Mr. Samuel Smith applying for the position in the fire department made vacant by the death of the late Geo. Mair.

Laid on the table.

A communication was read from Mr. Amos Walker, Salem, asking for some slight repairs to the road leading to his property.

The Street Commissioner informed the council that this little job would be attended to as soon as possible.

Mr. W. A. Grange presented to the council his certificate that he had found the local option petition properly signed as required by law. Filed.

W. S. Herrington, on behalf of the Public Library Board, asked the Ontario's Death Rate From Tuberculosis is Appalling.

That one-tenth of one-seventh of the deaths in Ontario are due to the ravages of consumption, and that there is a death from this disease every four hours in the year, are among the startling facts contained in the summary of facts now being sent out to Teachers and Clergymen of the Dominion by the National Sanitarium Association.

The outline shows 2250 deaths in a year in Ontario, one-third of which are of persons between the ages of 18 and 45.

PURITY and QUALITY

These two essentials explain the great increase in demand for our bread since the installation of our new electrical bread mixer.

We have now a thoroughly up-to-date and sanitary bread plant, including bread mixer, sanitary steel troughs, etc. As a result we are able to place before the public a pure, clean wholesome, smooth-grained loaf of bread.

We ask all housewives who desire purity and quality in their bread to try a loaf of this bread and be convinced of its superiority.

Manitoba Man Gets Big Prize at Chicago Cattle Show.

With His Steer Glencarnock Victor II., J. D. McGregor of Brandon, Carries Off the Championship of All Grades and Cross-breeds by Ages—Same Exhibitor Wins Several Other Big Awards.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Yesterday at the International Live Stock Show in the cattle class, the time was taken up with the judging of fat steers. Entries in these classes were very much in excess of any previous exhibition and competition was keen, twenty and even twenty-five in a class was not uncommon.

J. D. McGregor, Brandon, took one first, one fourth and two championships. The first-class in which he showed was that of steers, calved between Jan. 1 and Sept. 1, 1911. There were 22 in the class and he got fourth with Glencarnock Advance. The next class was that of calves dropped between Sept. 1, 1911, and Jan. 1, 1912. In this class he got first, with Glencarnock Victor II., against 19 competitors.

The next struggle was for the championship of all grades and cross breeds by ages. It was a fateful moment, as it is always felt that the grand champion of grades and cross breeds has an excellent chance for the championship of the show. Finally the award was made to the Manitoba steer Glencarnock Victor II.

Next came the classes of three, made up of one two-year-old, one yearling and one calf. The McGregor herd was made up of Glencarnock Advance, Glencarnock Victor II. and Glencarnock Boy, the last named a June calf. With this herd J. D. McGregor pulled off another prize of $75. This win meant that he had the three best cross bred or grade steers in the show. There was four prizes in the class and every one of them was taken by a Black herd.

ANALYSIS GOING ON.

"Clay Belt" Survey Now Being Made Says Minister of Lands.

TORONTO, Dec. 2.—In reply to the demand made by Prof. B. E. Fernow of Toronto University Forestry Faculty for an expert analysis of soils in the "clay belt" of Northern Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Hearst stated yesterday that every surveyor sent out by the Department was given instructions to prepare exact reports of the soil qualifications he discovered. No district was open unless it was known that it would produce good crops.

It was declared also that the average settler was more inclined to look at the actual results of the land, and to judge the soil quality from the growth upon it than to depend entirely on a scientific analysis. To carry out a scheme similar to that proposed by the dean would be almost impracticable.

Some of the references of Dean Fernow to the class of people living on poor farms are said by the Department to be out of accord with actual conditions.

NEED SHIFTING BOARDS

Lake Boats Would Be Safer Than Says Capt. Lawson.

Resumed Inquiry Into Causes of Lake Disaster Elicit Suggestions—Weather Man Says No Saturday Night Forecasts Could Be Sent Out Because Telegraph Offices Were Shut.

GODERICH, Dec. 2.—Another session of the coroner's inquest in connection with the recent disaster on Lake Huron, was held here yesterday afternoon and a further adjournment was made to Saturday, Dec. 13, when it is hoped a conclusion will be reached. Coroner Hunter presided and Crown Attorney Seager conducted the investigation, which has developed into a general enquiry as to the conditions affecting lake navigation.

Capt. Alex. Lawson, who navigated the lakes for many years in sailing craft, said that vessels should be compelled to use shifting boards. He thought, too, if some of the wooden lifeboats carried on some of the freighters were put into the water they would not float; the metallic boats were better. There appeared to be no boat drill, and the men w^o sail the freighters nowadays would not be able to handle the boats if they got them launched. Goderich harbor, he said, should be widened and deepened and with the completion of the breakwater it would be a good harbor.

William Allan of the Toronto office of the Dominion meteorological service gave some very interesting testimony. He said the heavy gale signal was up at all ports on the lakes from Nov. 7 to Nov. 10, and the forecasts sent out predicted strong winds and snow. Only five times this season, once in July, once in September, twice in October, and then on Nov. 7, were the heavy gale signals ordered up on the lakes, and on each occasion it was justified by the weather that followed. It was the practice to make out the weather charts twice each day, at 9.30 a.m. and 10.30 p.m., and immediately afterwards to wire the forecasts to all the stations. On Saturday night the forecasts were not sent out, as the telegraph offices closed early and were not open regularly on Sunday. Accordingly, when the storm abated on Saturday, Nov. 8 (this storm was felt chiefly on Lake Superior), there was no way of giving mariners a warning of the great storm that came on Sunday. The witness maintained, however, that as the heavy gale signal was still up this should have served as a warning. Since the storm the meteorological office has been sending the Saturday night forecast to the wireless station at Midland, where it could be communicated to vessels having wireless equipment.

That there were not enough inspectors and that the inspectors did not have sufficient time to do their work thoroughly was the opinion of John W. Taylor, for many years an engineer on lake steamers. As a consequence, not much dependence could be placed on lifeboats and lifebelts for the saving of life. He, too, thought every vessel should have a shifting board.

Capt. Stephen, of the steamer Kaministiquia, who has the proud distinction of having brought his vessel safely through the storm on Lake Huron, told of his experience on the Winston Churchill Will Fly an Aeroplane Himself for First Time.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2.—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, has become a competent pilot. He has taken lessons recently at the flying depots, and on Sunday ascended at East Church in a dual control biplane with Captain Lushington.

Saturday morning Winston had his final lessons to complete his licence, and after lunch, donning his jacket and airman's cap, took his seat in a dual control biplane with Captain Wildman Lushington.

After an altitude of 500 feet, Churchill took charge of the machine, flying to and fro in a strong wind for nearly 45 minutes and covering altogether between 30 and 40 miles. Captain Lushington then relinquished control and brought the machine to the earth.

To Discuss Hindu Problem?

VANCOUVER, Dec. 2.—Although tentatively is only here on a genealogical investigation trip, Commissioner Caminetti, head of the United States immigration service, who is in the city for several hours yesterday, according to advices from India, is making arrangements for a conference with Sir Richard Mead on the Hindu problem, which is the light of the recent ruling of Justice Hunter, has now assumed most serious aspect.

Christmas Gifts For Soldiers.

MANITOWA, Dec. 2.—A consignment of 10 tons of Christmas presents dispatched from here yesterday for Spanish soldiers in the field in Mexico. The gifts consisting of brandy, beer, cigars, cigarettes, jam, jelly, sugar, coffee, chocolate and other articles were sent to Spain aboard the Spanish steamship "Alfonso," which took also $8,000 sh.

Counsel In Rates Case Will Now Present Argument.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2.—All the evidence in the western freight rates case has been put in. At four o'clock yesterday afternoon Chief Commissioner H. L. Drayton, K.C., declared the case formally closed and called on the respective counsel to proceed with the argument, but on the plea of James Bicknell, counsel for the Dominion Government, and of F. H. Chrysler, K.C., counsel for the C.P.R., the board agreed to an adjournment until Thursday morning. From the time the arguments begin until they are definitely closed the board will hold evening sessions if necessary as it is planned to call a halt on the arguments not later than Saturday.

Mr. Bicknell will be the first to address the board. He will be followed by counsel for the western provinces in the case and Isaac Pitblado, K.C., for the Winnipeg Board of Trade. The legal representatives for the railways will follow.

ANOTHER REVOLT BEGINS.

South Chinese Rebels Are Intriguing With Outlaws.

PEKIN, Dec. 2.—Official telegrams received at the capital yesterday from various provinces in South China, report that the Chinese rebels are intriguing with numerous outlaw bands to form the nucleus of another rebellion against the Government of President Yuan Shi Kai. Peking officials believe that the rebel party will not be able to organize or finance another revolution, but in other quarters fear is expressed that it may succeed in perpetuating the lawless conditions which now prevail in almost every province of the republic.

The Chinese Government is developing an extensive secret service and summary executions without a semblance of a court trial frequently occur.

Former Deputy Speaker Dead.

ST. MARY'S, Ont., Dec. 2.—G. H. McIntyre, ex-M.P. for South Perth, died at his home here yesterday morning.

Mr. McIntyre had been a victim of rheumatism for some time, since he undertook to do some wading in Muskoka water, where he had contracts. He was for a time the deputy Speaker of the House of Commons at Ottawa during the Laurier regime.

engineer on lake steamers. As a consequence, not much dependence could be placed on lifeboats and lifebelts for the saving of life. He, too, thought every vessel should have a shifting board.

Capt. Stephen, of the steamer Kamistiquia, who has the proud distinction of having brought his vessel safely through the storm on Lake Huron, told of his experience on the fateful day. Capt. Stephens made several suggestions for the improvement of Goderich harbor, but said no matter how good a harbor it might be no vessel could have made it in that storm.

R. A. Harrison of Cleveland, agent of the Lake Carriers' Association, told of the system by which that association kept close track of all the sailors shipping in their boats. By means of this system all but one of the bodies from the lake carriers' boats had been identified.

Rescue Stations Needed.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2.—Col. John A. Currie, M.P. for North Simcoe, is in Ottawa to-day to urge upon the Government the appointment of a commission to enquire into the recent great lakes catastrophe, and to report upon the feasibility and desirability of establishing life-saving stations on the Canadian shores of the lakes.

Col. Currie points out that all along the shores of the United States side of the great lakes, life-saving stations exist, and he is of the opinion that had there been life-saving stations at some of the points where vessels drifted ashore during the recent storm many lives would have been saved.

The probabilities are that joint action will be taken with the United States Government in this connection.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER ANNOUNCES LIBERAL TARIFF POLICY.

While the Conservatives were trying to insinuate that the Liberals, like themselves, had no definite tariff policy, Sir Wilfrid Laurier was carefully considering the situation in a broad statesman-like way, unhastened and undeterred by hostile clamour. With his colleagues he studied the situation created by the new American tariff and the excessive and increasing cost of living in Canada. Then the Liberal chieftain made up his mind and on Wednesday, November 26th, his policy was announced to the country, at Hamilton, Ontario. As was to be expected it was a progressive enlargement of the previous Liberal tariff policy, and one adapted to present conditions. Free food is its essence—the prompt taking off of the duties from the necessities of life so that the over-burdened Canadian consumer may live as cheaply as possible. The historic Liberal policy was again to the front in Sir Wilfrid's declaration that the problems of living must come before the buildings of dreadnaughts. There was no recrimination, no hesitation, in Sir Wilfrid's declaration. It was the serene confidence of a great leader who knew that the future would justify his course that Sir Wilfrid laid down the policy upon which in all probability the next general election will be fought.

Sir Wilfrid's words should be emblazoned on the annals of the country. He declared—"I have no recrimination to make. The problem is before us. There our duty lies. The situation requires action, prompt, unhesitating action. The policy I give you this moment, the policy I believe every patriot in Canada ought to support, and the policy I believe it to be the duty of the Government to immediately inaugurate is THE POLICY OF ABSOLUTELY FREE FOOD, FREE FROM CUSTOMS DUTIES."

That is a clear, distinct policy. There is no shuffling or high sounding prolongation of life be taxed this way for the benefit of no one but an extravagant administration?

TAXED BY THE MOUTHFUL. HOW THE CANADIAN MEAL TABLE FURNISHES REVENUE.

Here are the few taxes which the Canadian consumer has to pay every time he sits down to a meal:

Canned Meats.....	27½%
Bread Stuffs.....	17½%
Flour.....	60c barrel
Fresh Meats.....	3c pound
Rice.....	75c per cwt.
Sugar.....	$1.08 per cwt.
Eggs.....	3c doz.
Oatmeal.....	60c per cwt.
Butter.....	4c per lb.
Cheese.....	3c per lb.
Condensed Milk.....	3½c tin
Milk Preparations 25%
Macaroni.....	$1.25 cwt.
Soices.....	3c-10c lb.
Fruit Essences.....	$2.40 gal. and 30%
Canned Goods.....	2½c lb.
Fish.....	1c-5c lb. or 35%
Currants.....	1c lb.
Corn-meal.....	25c barrel
Cocoa.....	3c lb. and 20%
Coffee.....	2c lb. and 10%

The list could be stretched indefinitely, but this is sufficient to show the Canadian consumer the manner in which, with every mouthful of food, he is compelled to contribute to the taxation which goes to produce the enormous number of armoured and public works which such spendthrifts as Hon. Mr. Rogers and Col. Hon. Sam Hughes are scattering over the country. Should the meals of the Canadian working man be taxed in this way to help the Government hand $15,000,000 gifts to Mackenzie and Mann?

BELLIGERENT R. B. BENNETT.

TORY M. P. ACTUALLY WANTS MR. BORDEN TO FULFILL PROMISES.

Another blow has come to the Borden Government, the most unkindest cut of all, when R. B. Bennett, M. P. for Calgary, in his annual address to his electors, had the temerity to promise that he would resign his seat unless Mr. Borden kept some of his pre-election pledges. Mr. Bennett was particularly anxious to get the provincial natural resources out of the hands of Hon. Mr. Rogers and his clique, and intimated that he would vacate his seat speedily unless Mr. Borden handed them over to the western provinces. In 1907, Mr. Borden denounced the Liberal Government for retaining control of public lands in the new Western provinces and

County Council

County Council Chambers,
Napanee, Dec. 2nd, 1913.

Council met at 2 p.m., at the call of the Warden.

Members all present. Warden Ryan in the chair.

The minutes of the last day of last session were read, and on motion were confirmed.

J. E. Harrison, Reeve of Sheffield, stated that W. D. Black, M.P.P. for Addington, asked him to have the cheque from the County for grant re Clare River bridge forwarded to the Provincial Treasurer as soon as possible. Mr. Harrison also informed the Council that the bridge is completed and is a credit to the builders.

A report was received from the Roads and Bridges Committee of Frontenac, in which they recommended that the sum of $100.00 each be granted by the Councils of Frontenac and Lennox and Addington towards building a bridge on the boundary between Barrie and Anglesea.

Mr. Kimmerly, Reeve of Kaladar, A. and E., stated that the bridge had been completed and that each of the above Counties had paid their proportionate share.

A communication was received from F. Allen, Sharbot Lake, Secretary of the Frontenac and North Addington Teachers' Institute, saying there were 45 registered out of a total of 65 eligible teachers. On motion the communication was received and filed.

Moved by Reeve Harrison, seconded by Reeve Wartman, that the cheque for $1000.00 granted to the Provincial Government, to assist them in rebuilding Clare River bridge, be forwarded as soon as possible, and that the thanks of this Council be tendered to the Government for the substantial structure they have erected over the said Clare River, and for their assuming same. Carried.

A communication was received from James S. Bell, saying that the culvert south of his place had broken down in the centre and needed repairing. He had been unable to get Reeve Cook on the phone and as it was getting late in the season he hired three men and repaired the same at a total cost of $5.00 (except tile) and asked payment for the same.

On motion the above account was ordered paid.

A communication was received from W. D. Jackson, Secretary Ottawa Winter Fair Association, asking the Council to give a grant as a special prize for the next Fair of the above Association. On motion the communication was referred to the Finance Committee.

Communication from W. C. McLean, Commissioner and Chief Engineer of Public Highways, advising that the proposed extensions to County Roads in Lennox and Addington be not pressed upon the Government at present.

Communication from Hotel Dieu, Kingston, acknowledging the increased grant from the County. On motion the communication was received and filed.

From the Department of Education, Toronto, stating that the following were the grants for 1913: Napanee Collegiate Institute, $1,224.36; Newburgh High School, $647.10. Ordered filed.

On motion the Council adjourned until to-morrow at 10 a.m.

the present action. The policy I give you this moment, the policy I believe every patriot in Canada ought to support, and the policy I believe it to be the duty of the Government to immediately inaugurate is THE POLICY OF ABSOLUTELY FREE FOOD, FREE FROM CUSTOMS DUTIES.

That is a clear, distinct policy. There is no shuffling or high sounding verbiage as in Mr. Borden's tariff talk. When the Liberals return to power they will take off the last vestige of duty from food, so as to enable every Canadian to obtain his living as cheaply as possible. After that measure of relief has been given the Naval question will be taken up by the Liberals, where they left it in 1911, but with the natural progress demanded by events.

Sir Wilfrid's declaration of policy has been received with universal applause throughout Canada, and has caused confusion amongst the Conservatives, who realize that the Liberal leader has recognized the sore spot in the body politic and has chosen the best and promptest means to remedy it.

WHY TAX EGGS?

DEALERS SHOW INJUSTICE OF PRESENT TARIFF.

A good instance of injustice of the present system of taxing food is furnished by the egg market. There is a duty of three cents a dozen on eggs, presumably to help the Canadian hen to overcome the severe climate that shuts off her winter activities. In Montreal, this week, there was agitation because strictly fresh eggs were being sold around 60 cents a dozen, with the probability they would go up to 75 cents before the winter was over.

In reply to public clamour, the leading egg brokers took stock of the position and issued a statement. This showed that there were only 31,796 cases of eggs in storage at Montreal; that the average consumption for Montreal was 7,000 cases a week, and that the first Canadian supplies of eggs could not be expected until March 1st next. That is, the present supply will be exhausted under normal conditions by the first of January, and between that date and March 1st, every egg eaten in Montreal will have to be imported, probably from the Southern States, where the milder climate encourages cheap egg production.

Practically similar conditions prevail at every big centre of population in Canada. For years past the Canadian hen has not produced enough eggs to supply the population, and every winter the large cold storage firms have had to import thousands upon thousands of cases.

The position is simple. In summer, when the Canadian barn yards are productive, there is no need for protection of eggs. In winter there is no need of it because practically there is no production to protect—for the same climatic reason that oranges are not grown here. Why then should the public be compelled to pay three cents a dozen to the Government on top of the already extortionate price of eggs? Why should the invalid poor, to whom fresh eggs might mean his seat unless Mr. Borden kept some of his pre-election pledges. Mr. Bennett was particularly anxious to get the provincial natural resources out of the hands of Hon. Mr. Rogers and his clique, and intimated that he would vacate his seat speedily unless Mr. Borden handed them over to the western provinces. In 1907, Mr. Borden denounced the Liberal Government for retaining control of public lands in the new Western provinces, and declared—"We shall advocate and maintain the unimpaired maintenance of all powers of self-government which have been conferred upon the provinces of Canada under the constitution."

The only move bearing upon provincial rights made by Premier Borden in his more than two years of office has been the Highways Aid Bill and the Agricultural Aid Bill, in each of which he tried to attack Provincial rights by retaining control of moneys in his own hands. In each case it was only the activity of the opposition which protected the Provinces' rights. Mr. Borden used to say that if he ever formed a government it would not be 24 hours old before he would move to give the Western Provinces their natural resources. His government is now 25 months old and nothing has been attempted. No wonder Mr. Bennett professes to be disgusted.

In his further remarks Mr. Bennett was not so happy. He declared he had voted to present Mackenzie and Mann with over $15,000,000 in order to keep the Canadian Northern out of the hands of the receivers. The records show that Mr. Bennett voted consistently against the Liberal amendment which provided that this money should be a loan, or if it must be a clear gift, the Canadian Northern should give some return in the way of increased government control of the Western lines and reduction of Western rates to the same level as those in the East. A good many people in the West as well as the East would like to know why a loan of $15,000,000 would not have been equally efficacious to keep the Canadian Northern out of the hands of the receivers, or whether conceding the equalization of rates and government control in British Columbia would have forced the road into liquidation.

Apparently Mr. R. B. Bennett, M. P., is merely bluffing in the effort to make his constituents believe that he is trying to call his leader's bluff.

ACTION NOT ENQUIRY.

The Borden Government is talking vaguely of an enquiry into the high cost of living, urged on by resolutions of the Montreal City Council and other bodies. The Liberal policy is not to waste time enquiring into conditions which everybody knows to exist, but to take prompt steps to apply the proper remedy by taking the high duties off foodstuffs. It is the historic contrast between Liberal action and Tory inaction.

UNEXPECTED COMMON SENSE.

The Brockville Times (Cons.) recently said: "The common-sense policy is obviously a comparatively small, but effective modern navy for Canada which would in case of war automatically go under the control of the Admiralty." The only difference between this Conservative paper, and the Liberal naval policy is the word "automatic." The difference between it and the Borden policy of a $35,000,000 contribution is just as great as that between the Government and the Opposition. Common-sense must be with the Liberals.

MR. HAWKES IN LANARK.

CANADA FIRST AND A CANADIAN NAVY HIS SLOGAN.

Two events have startled Canada during the past week. The government has mustered up sufficient courage to name dates for the 'by-elections in South Lanark and Macdonald, setting them for December 13th, and Mr. Arthur Hawkes, who did such yeoman service for the Borden forces in 1911, has entered the contest in the former riding, in direct opposition to the government he helped elect so short a time ago.

It is a peculiar position in South Lanark. Two straight Tories, Lt.-Col. Balderson, as the nominee of the dissatisfied element, and Dr. Hanna representing the old time Tory machine are disputing for the seat, with an agreement on the part of Col. Balderson that if any Liberal duly nominated takes the field he will drop out—anything rather than sacrifice the spoils.

Into this domestic squabble Mr. Hawkes has injected his strong personality and his patriotic impulses with a platform which must prove more attractive to every true Canadian, Liberal or Tory, than the sordid rush to the trough of the other two candidates. Mr. Hawkes' general policy is "Canada First." His naval policy is exactly similar to that of the Liberals—"Canada can, and Canada will." He wants no subservience to Downing street, no putting of Canada into a second place by her own people, no Tory centralization, no sending of cheques or empty vessels for British sailors to fight in. His policy is one suitable to the dignity of Canada as a young nation—a Canadian fleet, built for and controlled by Canada, manned by Canadians ready to fight in defence of the Empire at any time the need exists, as the querdon of Canada's place in that Empire—just as Australia and New Zealand are doing, and as the Liberals propose that Canada should do.

Whatever may be the result at the polls there can be little doubt that Mr. Hawkes' courageous effort will do a good deal to make people think, and to elevate the current of politics in Canada.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. WHIRLING BODIESThey Invariably Tend to Point to the Pole Star.SCIENCE AND SPINNING A TOP.That the Earth Revolves on Its Axis
May Be Proved by a Simple Experiment
With the Gyrostat—Phenomena of Rapidly Revolving Objects.

Spinning a top is not always child's play, although it has generally been regarded as a juvenile sport. Once in England top whipping was practically ordered by law. There was a huge top formerly provided in every village to be whipped in frosty weather that the peasants might be kept warm by the exercise and out of mischief while they could not work. Shakespeare in "Twelfth Night" says, "His brains turn like a parish top." Ben Jonson in "New Inn" writes, "He spins like a parish top," and Beaumont and Fletcher have "dances like a town top and reels and bobbles." Evelyn, the diarist, speaking of the uses of willow wood, says that it was ordered that "the great town tops should be made thereof."

Of late years, however, science has taken a hand in spinning tops with fruitful results. From spinning tops we can learn many interesting and valuable things. For example, we can prove that the earth revolves on its axis and calculate at what speed.

The phenomena of spinning bodies are extremely interesting. If you throw your hat into the air, but without spinning it, it will fall perhaps on one side, perhaps on the other, but if you give it a spinning motion before sending it into the air it will always come down the same side down as it went up. The same thing is true of coins and in fact of all objects spun in this manner. A knife, if merely thrown into the air, may come down at any angle, but if held point down and sent spinning into the air it will on falling stick its point into the floor invariably.

Other bodies acquire rigidity when spun rapidly. Thus a piece of chain if placed on a wheel and made to revolve rapidly will form a perfect circle and if thrown off the wheel suddenly will roll across the table or the floor just like a solid hoop until its speed is diminished, when it will fall into a huddled mass.

It is a strange fact that spinning bodies always tend to point to the north star—the pole star. Gently, but firmly, they seem to tug at their moorings in an effort to assume the angle that will point them in that direction. Once they have attained it they do not vary.

If, now, you want to prove the rotation of the earth by means of a spinning top you can do so as follows: Provide yourself with a gyrostat capable of being driven by electricity so that it can run for twenty-four hours or more without stopping. Set this going and point it to the north or pole star. It will soon assume that direction. Now, as the axis of the top is pointed in a certain direction (say the north wall of the room) and stays there without ever moving, this will

TRUE HAPPINESS.It Enables Man "to Draw Contentment
From a Cup of Tears."

Wordsworth in one of his poems speaks of "a man too happy for mortality." We sometimes forget the spiritual significance of joy. The stoics believed that happiness was not essential to man and not to be expected. Happiness of a specific kind, based upon good fortune to the individual, is indeed not always to be expected nor always to be desired. But the deeper happiness and joy that come from the sure triumph of the good and the true are essential to the individual well being and the progress of society.

There have been those who learned through a beautiful consecration "to draw contentment from a cup of tears" and who came, through life's higher discipline, to know that there is a deep and abiding joy in the midst of pain and disappointment, a joy built upon the knowledge of life's greatness and the ability of the soul to rise above the temporary thing.

Such a joy as this is needed to make a man capable of inheriting eternity here and hereafter, for it raises man above the merely mortal and invests him with energy to pursue the tasks that are without end and fills him with a desire to ally himself with the powers that build the beauty of a continuing world.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

SILENCED BY A LOOK.Gladstone's Burning Eyes Rendered
Blackie Speechless.

Gladstone had peculiar, eagle-like eyes. At a dinner at which he and Professor Blackie were present the two men were opposite, and when Gladstone gave in a forcible way his idea that Homer was no longer recited, but chanted, the professor cried out, "Mr. Gladstone, I don't believe a word of it!" Then he rose to argue the matter and said one sentence, but got no further. He had met Gladstone's gaze and seen his outer eyelids widened to their fullness in a steady glare, and his tongue stumbled, and he sank back into his chair in confusion. The writer concludes:

"Go to the zoo for it. Take your umbrella. Make your way to the place where eagles, vultures, falcons and such like creatures blink on their perches. Select a bird. Stare at him with insult and you will see the outer lids expand as Mr. Gladstone's did. Poke at him with your umbrella. The filmy vertical lids through which he looks at the sun and opens to paralyze his prey will part, and then you will see what Blackie saw and understand his feelings."

When Britain Fought For an Ear.

Perhaps the most extraordinary example of Britain going to war for "no reason at all" occurred in the reign of George II. One Robert Jenkins, an English merchant-captain, trading from Jamaica, arriving in England in 1733, reported that the sloop had been boarded by the Spanish coast guards and that, though no proof of smuggling had been found, he had been tortured and his ear torn off. All England flew into an uproar. "Jenkins' ear" divided parties and shook Walpole's ministry itself. The house of commons sent for Jenkins, and he was told to bring his ear with him. The incident grew into

REMBRANDT AN EASY MARK.The Great Painter Was a Victim of Reckless Speculation.

German art students who have been investigating the reason why Rembrandt died hopelessly bankrupt have discovered that he was an incorrigible speculator. It had hitherto been pop-

Unfortunate speculations turn out to have been the cause of his financial ruin. Documents have been disinterhe had suffered heavy losses in busidamages and losses on the high seas.

Documents have been intro- red showing that he officially informed the municipality of Amsterdam that he had suffered heavy losses in busi- ness transactions as well as through damages and losses on the high seas.

It was at a time, 1640-00, when all Europe was engaged in feverish money making in connection with Holland's meteoric commercial prosperity. Speculation took place on a reckless scale. Immense fortunes were sunk in shipping, banking and colonial enterprises.

Rembrandt, whose highly artistic nature was sadly devoid of even elementary business sense, fell an easy victim to the scheming speculators of that era of frenzied finance, and he lost his entire fortune. Many of his pictures were seized for debt by the legal authorities before the canvases were half finished. Bankruptcy finally overtook him and compelled him to sell all his properties, his home and priceless works of art under the hammer at sacrifice prices.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Origin of Iron Duke.

The Iron Duke, of course, was Wellington, but he came by the nickname in a roundabout way. He was never so called until long after Waterloo. An iron steamship, a novelty at the time, was built in the Mersey and named the Duke of Wellington, and so the vessel came to be known as the Iron Duke, the transition being easy and obvious. It was the duke's union of resolution and physical energy which made the popular name for the Mersey built steamship to fit him like a perfect cap. Such, at least, is the explanation of his biographer, Sir Herbert Maxwell.—London Chronicle.

Power of Desire.

It has been said of Abraham Lincoln that as a boy he read less than a half dozen books and that they were such books as "Pilgrim's Progress," Weems' "Life of Washington" and a popular history of the United States written in almost primary language. Yet Lincoln was able to express himself more clearly than almost any public or literary man of his time. Such is the power of desire.

Provide yourself with a gyrostast capable of being driven by electricity so that it can run for twenty-four hours or more without stopping. Set this going and point it to the north or pole star. It will soon assume that direction. Now, as the axis of the top is pointed in a certain direction (say the north wall of the room) and stays there, without ever moving, this will be a guide to you to check off your observations. And as you watch you will notice that in six hours' time the top will point to the west and six hours later to the south, six hours later to the east, and at the conclusion of the twenty-four hours it will have completed the circle and will again be pointing due north. It will have completed the circuit of the four walls of the room.

What does this mean? It means that the room has revolved round the top, but as the room is fixed to the solid earth it implies that the whole earth has revolved round the top, which alone remained stationary. Consequently we have proved by this means that the earth has turned once round on its axis, and that it does so turn, and that the heavens remain still and stationary.

Many interesting astronomical discoveries have been made by the aid of spinning tops, and the facts obtained by their study have been applied to the rotation of heavenly bodies, the earth included, and the "wobble" of its axis has been calculated by this means. In many ways, therefore, the spinning top is a valuable scientific instrument.—Hereward Carrington in New York World.

Effect of a Dream.

"The happiest dream I can recall," said a successful business man, "was one I had ten years ago. In it I was with my good mother again, seated in the old home church. She placed her hand on my head and whispered, 'Son, I am proud of you.' That little statement has kept me out of wrongdoing more than all the sermons I have ever heard and, I think, has made me a better man."—Philadelphia Record.

As Values Are Judged.

"Great Scott, woman! Are you trying to ruin me?"

"Why, Henry! You don't even know what I paid for the gown."

"I know that any gown that looks as bad as that one costs more than I can afford to pay."—Life.

Regularity

of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. Salts and other harsh mineral purgatives irritate the delicate lining of the bowels. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills—entirely vegetable—regulate the bowels effectively without weakening, sickening or griping. Use

"Jenkins' ear" divided parties and shook Walpole's ministry itself. The house of commons sent for Jenkins, and he was told to bring his ear with him. The Isle of Yachts.

Cowes had many ups and downs before it finally attained its destiny as the headquarters of yachting. Sir John Oglander, writing in Stuart times, says, "I knew when there was not above three or four houses at Cowes," but he had counted 300 ships at anchor there, "and I was and am persuaded that if our wars and troubles had not unfortunately happened it would have grown as famous as Newport." The wars complained of were the civil wars. Foreign war had been a fine thing for Cowes, since the warships bought the island's produce there. But the civil wars struck the gentry hard, and Sir John adds the coming of lawyers as another curse. The first attorney was expelled from the island by the governor as a public danger. "Now peace and law hath beggared us all," says Sir John.—London Chronicle.

Books by Weight.

Many years ago in San Francisco there was a bookseller who had an intimate knowledge of fiction prices, but who was all astray when it came to general literature or scientific works. A customer having selected a volume would ask the price and, without so much as bothering to look at the title, if he saw that it was not a novel, the seller would roughly weigh it on his hand and name the sum. Many a bargain was picked up in that way, but as the bookseller also bought on the same principle, he never lost anything to speak of.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Game of Cobbler.

The players form a circle around one of their number, who personates the cobbler and for whom a stool is provided, on which he takes his seat, saying, as he goes in mimicry through the operations of his trade: "Come, ladies and gentlemen, come and let me try on your shoes!" to which the band reply by dancing round him as quickly as possible, singing, "Try, try!" The cobbler, without moving from his seat, strives to seize one of the dancers—a girl by her dress or sash, a boy by his leg—and, if he succeeds, becomes master and remains idle in the middle of the circle, while his prisoner pays a forfeit and becomes cobbler.

Worse Than She Suspected.

"You ought to make allowances, Mrs. Woosely, for the eccentricities of genius. If your husband were an ordinary man he would have a placid disposition and be easy to get along with."

"Do you think my husband is a genius?"

"Certainly. Everybody recognizes him as one."

"Dear me! Here I've been hoping all this time that it might merely be indigestion or something he could overcome by dieting."

The Glorious Tone of the New Scale Williams Piano

is the crowning glory of this peerless instrument. Great artists praise it for its noble volume and majestic grandeur. Singers delight in its liquid sweetness, that makes it the ideal accompaniment of the voice. Teachers prefer THE NEW SCALE WILLIAMS for its sustained singing tone.

Whether it be a caressing melody of Schumann or a poem of passion of Chopin—every shade of emotion is reflected by this marvellous piano. Treble, middle and bass blend so harmoniously that each note is a perfect part of a wonderful whole—and gives way to its successor with supremely musical effect. This blending of tone is a veritable triumph for THE NEW SCALE WILLIAMS.

This magnificent tone is obtained because THE NEW SCALE WILLIAMS has the longest strings to a given scale—largest size of sound board—and the most powerful elastic action—possible to be put in a piano.

Architecturally, THE NEW SCALE WILLIAMS PIANO leaves nothing to be desired. The chaste and restful outlines are in full accord with the true and beautiful in art.

This is clearly shown in our illustrated booklets. The magnificent styles are accurately pictured, and many special features explained which have made THE NEW SCALE WILLIAMS the best known—the best liked—and the best—Pianos in the Dominion.

In order to place a NEW SCALE WILLIAMS in every home, we have arranged a new plan of Easy Payments. Write for the booklets and let us explain how easily you may own one of these beautiful instruments.

THE BOY SCOUTS.

Boys, boys everywhere are keen to the right thing, ready to be ready to play the game, and read the right men to lead them.

In the Scout Movement it is not trouble to get boys. Our problem is to get the men to lead and there thousands of men who would be glad to help if they realized the importance of boy life upon the future of Canada. A little sacrifice, the gift of a few hours a week—for what? assist in moulding good citizen Canada. Men, why not give a little time to the boys of your community? You will be the stronger and better for having devoted some time to the training of the boys—lines which tend to better citizen and a clean generation of boys.

The Scout Movement is trying to take care of the boys during play. Each part of the training is towards making manly men. Greater asset can we give to Empire than a race of up-right, manly, clean, Canadian boys.

You have men who are helping boys to become better citizens. There are not others who will say, "I also help in this work." Will you help? If you will take time to look into the work and training of Boy Scouts your answer will be "Yes." Show your interest in the Scout Movement and encourage those who are working for the boys in your community.

Any information in connection with the Movement will be gladly furnished upon application to the Secretaries, Provincial Headquarters for Ontario, Bloor and Sherbourne sts., Toronto.

and Works—Holiness Not an Empty Title—He that Doeth
Righteousness Is Righteous—God
Has Been Slandered.

PASTOR RUSSELL

New York, N. Y., November 30.—Pastor Russell spoke at the new Temple to-day. We report his theme from the text, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of Hosts: the whole earth shall be full of His glory." — Isaiah 6:3.

As usual, the Pastor spoke without notes.

He introduced his theme with the declaration that since shortly after the Second Century the Christian Church has been gradually led into a total misconception of the Divine character as manifested in the Di- vine attitude toward humanity. Er- rors have been enlarged upon until to-day the most horrible descriptions of the Almighty appear in Christian publications, creeds, commentaries, etc. Heathendom's idols cannot be compared with the Satanic descrip- tions which the creeds of the Dark Ages give of the God of all Grace.

The Pastor holds that the world ju- ges God by these printed mis- representations. Therefore it is no wonder that the missionaries make so little impression upon the heathen, who openly refuse to wor- ship so unjust and vicious a God as the creeds present—a God who sen- tenced their forefathers to everlasting torture because ignorant of the only Name that brings salvation.

To the extent that any intelligent Christian supports the blasphemous statements of the creeds he is re- sponsible, said the Pastor. Since denominational names represent the doctrines which led to the formation of these denominations, the only way to rectify matters is either as denominations to repudiate publicly these slanders of the Deity, or else as individuals to withdraw publicly from all such creeds. The latter method he considers to be the surest, quickest and right way; for the Bi- ble never authorized any one to organize sect or party in the Church.

The speaker then demonstrated that the Bible recognizes only the one Church of Christ—"The Church of the First-born, written in Heav- en." All begotten of the Holy Spirit, consecrated to be footstep followers of their Saviour, are members of the one Church. Their names are writ- ten in the Lamb's Book of Life, and they have the promise of entrance into His Kingdom in the First Resur- rection, if faithful.

"Seducing Spirits"—"Doctrines of Devils."

Pastor Russell does not wish to be misunderstood as charging that these blasphemous doctrines were intentionally introduced to misrepresent God or to deceive mankind. He ac-

A Big Handkerchief.

Dr. Paul Ehrlich, the famous German scientist, had a habit in his younger days, says Mr. Wile in "Men Around the Kaiser," of collecting any pieces of old linen he found about the house with which to clean his scientific instruments, his microscope slides, and so on. Castoff shirts and old handkerchiefs were his specialties, and he used to stuff them all into his capacious pockets so as to have them handy whenever he required them.

At a public lecture one hot day Dr. Ehrlich perspired freely and, wanting to mop his brow, he put his hand into the nearest pocket and grasped what he thought to be a handkerchief. He tugged and tugged, and it came out and came out until he had exposed to the full view of his astonished audience a complete nightgown belonging to his wife.

How Rain Bores Holes.

When rain falls it does not actually soak into the earth, but bores its way in, forming tiny tubes. These tubes are so small that it would be impossible to insert a hair in one of them without bursting its walls. Sometimes the tubes are bored down to a depth of four or five feet. When the surface dries the water evaporates from the tubes just as it would from a pipe. If the tube is twisted it takes longer for the water to evaporate. If one takes a rake and stirs the ground after each rain he breaks the tops of the tubes, and the water will stand in them for months.

into His Kingdom in the First Resurrection, if faithful.

"Seducing Spirits"—"Doctrines of Devils."

Pastor Russell does not wish to be misunderstood as charging that these blasphemous doctrines were intentionally introduced to misrepresent God or to deceive mankind. He accepts St. Paul's explanation. The Apostle wrote prophetically, "I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ."—2 Corinthians 11:3.

The Pastor declared that this is exactly what happened. The Church has been beguiled by earthly favors, not only into a wrong attitude toward the kingdoms of this world, but into a confusing mass of blasphemous error. He then traced the gradual falling away of the Church. First the bishops were beguiled into thinking themselves to be the successors to The Twelve Apostles, and equally inspired mouthpieces of Christ. Thus was established the doctrine of Apostolic Succession. The inspired words of Jesus and The Twelve took second rate, and the masses ceased to study the Bible.

Upon this foundation, Satan gradually built the doctrines of purgatory and eternal torture. When in the Sixteenth Century, the Bible again began to be consulted, Satan so arranged matters that our forefathers retained the Hell of indescribable torture for all but the Elect—repudiating as unscriptural the ameliorating purgatory feature.

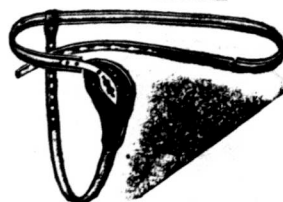

Next the Pastor traced the parallel between the Church's deception and Eve's. Mother Eve was beguiled into believing that God's threat, "Dying, thou shalt die," was untrue. The serpent declared, "Ye shall not surely die." Deceived by the lie, she led her husband and our race into death.

The seducing spirits mentioned by St. Paul, of whom Satan is prince, have sought to perpetuate this lie in the Church. By visions, dreams, tipping tables, mediums, etc., they have deceived Christians, as previously they deceived the heathen, into believing that the dead are really alive. Upon that foundation they built the doctrines of hell, purgatory, masses for the dead, the predestination of the non-elect to eternal anguish, etc.

The Pastor's Thanksgiving.

Last Thursday the Pastor's heart went out to God in special thanksgiving that the eyes of his understanding were opening to see God's glorious character in the light of His great loving Plan of Salvation for both Church and world. Soon all delusions of the past shall have gone, and the knowledge of God's glory shall fill the earth—ocean-deep.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, offerings for sale this morning amounted to 1900 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 350 calves.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for cattle today, but prices were well maintained at the advance noted a week ago on account of the continued scarcity of good stock. There continues to be a steady demand for supplies of common cattle for shipment to the United States, but the volume of trading doing in this direction is by no means as large as it was sometime ago. Demand from butchers was only for small lots to fill actual wants. Packers bought freely, however, and sales of a few loads of choice steers were made at $7.75 to $8 and good at $7.25 to $7.50 per 100 pounds.

Sheep and Lambs Wanted.

The feature of the small meat trade continues to be the strong undertone to the market for sheep and lambs. Prices for the former have scored a further advance of 50c and for the latter 25c per 100 pounds. At the higher range of prices there was a good demand and an active trade was done, with sales of western lambs at $8 to $8.25, and choice ewes at $5.25 to $5.50 per 100 pounds. The trade in calves is quiet, owing to the large falling off in the receipts, but there is a good demand from local buyers for all the choice stock offered at firm prices.

A weaker feeling developed in the local hog market and prices declined another 25c per 100 pounds, but at this reduction there was a keen demand from packers as some of them were short of stock, and an active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $9.25 and straight lots at $9 per 100 pounds weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.50 to $8.25; do., medium, $6 to $7; do., common, $5 to $5.50; canners, $3.65 to $3.75; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6.50 to $6.75; do., medium, $5 to $6; do., bulls, $4.50 to $6.25; milkers, choice, each, $85 to $90; do., common and medium, each, $75 to $80; spring ers, $65 to $70; shorthorns, $5.25 to $5.50; bucks and culs, $4.75 to $5; lambs, $7.50 to $8.25; hogs, f.o.b., $9 to $9.25; calves, $5 to $20.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Cattle—Receipts 23,000. Market steady. Beef, $6.60 to $9.50; Texas steers, $6.65 to $7.70; stockers and feeders, $4.80 to $7.40; cows and heifers, $3.30 to $8.15; calves, $7 to $11.

Hogs—Receipts 37,000. Market weak. Light, $7.15 to $7.80; mixed, $7.45 to $7.95; heavy, $7.50 to $7.97; rough, $7.50 to $7.65; pigs, $5.10 to $7.15; bulk of sales, $7.60 to $7.85.

Sheep—Receipts 47,000. Market weak. Native, $3.90 to $5; yearlings, $5.10 to $6.50; lambs, native, $5.90 to $7.50.

Canadian Nominee Opposed.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Charles N. Armstrong, Canadian railway promoter and contractor, who is the official Conservative candidate for Coine Valley, is threatened with opposition from Capt. Bagnall, the previous Conservative candidate, who alleges that he has been slighted by the party. Armstrong, although a Conservative, supports the policy of home rule all round, but it is not understood that this attitude has caused the present difficulty. The situation is additionally interesting as Charles Leach, the present Liberal member, has decided to retire.

ONTARIO POLITICS

East Middlesex was the third bye-election held for the Provincial House this fall and in all three, York, Peel and Middlesex, the Government's majority has been materially reduced, especially in the last two. The east Middlesex contest on November 27th resulted in a reduction of the Conservative majority from 539 to 287—a drop of 250. John McFarlan was the successful Conservative candidate and John Laidlaw the representative of the Liberal and Temperance forces.

The result to the Liberals is distinctly encouraging. During the campaign a number of Conservative-Temperance leaders from the Riding, from London and Toronto, either took the platform for or actively supported the Liberal-Temperance candidate. This list included Rev. John Coburn and Ex-Alderman James Hales, Toronto, A. F. Jones, Lambeth, Rev. H. A. Graham, London, T. B. Escott, Wholesale Grocer, London, and Gordon Wright, Merchant of London.

Mayor Carter of Guelph spoke for Mr. Rowell in London. This, he explained, was his first appearance on a political platform in Canada. He had originally helped to put the Whitney Government in power but could not now support them owing to their lack of a satisfactory temperance policy.

The women of London and east Middlesex took a keen interest in the contest and worked for the Liberal-Temperance candidate. The London W. C. T. U. at a largely attended meeting of its members, entirely non-partisan, endorsed Laidlaw and urged support for Rowell's Abolish the Bar policy.

The movement of Conservative-Temperance men and of the women begun in east Middlesex, is one of those movements which inevitably spread and which must have a far-reaching effect in Provincial politics before long.

Lined up against the Liberals, Conservative-Temperance men and the women, were the official Government forces and the liquor interests. There were many signs of the activity of the latter. For example, William E. Allen, Secretary of the Ontario Licensed Victuallers Association, an organization to protect the interests of the hotel men, registered at the Tecumseh Hotel, London, during the contest. His presence at that time led to much comment.

"DOES EACH COW PAY?"

Some records of total production for the last seven months sent into the dairy division, Ottawa, showing how individual cows on adjoining farms vary in real earning capacity, will be of both interest to the average farmer and of value to men who are planning for better results next year.

A ten-year-old cow that calved on March 12th, has given since then just 2,812 pounds of milk and only 102 pounds of fat. A neighbouring 7 year old, calved 2nd April, gave 7,420 lbs. of milk and 228 pounds of fat, a little more than twice as much. In another contrasting pair in Glengarry, an 8 year-old, calved 6th April, gave only 3,394 pounds of milk and 129 pounds of fat; while a 5-year-old, calved 26th March, gave 7,280 pounds of milk and 241 pounds of fat, or again more than twice as much.

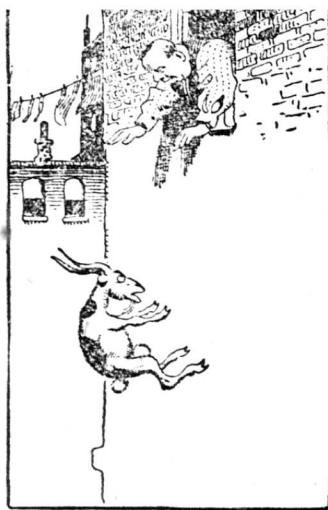

Have these two owners of two such poor cows the wrong type of cow; is it the old placid contentment with average yields, which are liable to degenerate so quickly into poor yields? An income from this milk of one cow of only $28, when another adjoining cow earns $72 as seen above, cannot be considered satisfactory when a man is supposed to be keeping cows with the object of making money. A simple milk record shows definitely which cows in the herd earn the most; don't "average" good and poor together, keep the best, and make sure that each cow pays.

Dairying, Fruit and Cold Storage.

Without cold storage the dairying and fruit industries would be greatly handicapped as much valuable produce would be destroyed by decay. Under such circumstances the cost of living would have mounted much higher than it has, and there would be little hope of establishing outside markets. Because these several lines of industry are closely allied they are all grouped under a single branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, that of the Dairy Cold Storage commissioner. This Branch, under Mr. J. A. Ruddick has become a far-reaching organization extending from the milking sheds and the orchards even to the great markets of the United Kingdom. Though the Dairy Division encouragement is given to farmers to increase the production of their herds, instructions are issued to teach the best methods of turning out fine butter or cheese. The fruit division seeks to enlighten growers on the condition of crops, to teach correct methods of production and marketing and to establish confidence in the value of Canadian fruit. The cold storage service assists institutions that require refrigeration to erect proper warehouses; during warm months aid is given railways that carry fruit and dairy produce to maintain low temperatures in their cars; and help is provided to secure cool temperatures to export produce while on the ocean. The extension of markets division exercises a close supervision over the handling of perishable farm produce in transit and, as opportunity offers, transportation companies are advised of needed improvements in their equipment. Besides other duties it keeps a careful register of the wholesale weekly prices of all manner of farm produce, and publishes these in the annual report of the Branch. The duties of this branch of government service enumerated are by no means complete, but they serve to indicate the nature of its work which bears a close relation to the cost of living. They are selected at more or less random from the Annual Report for the past fiscal year, which contains a large amount of useful information. This volume, which is made up of a general review by the Commissioner and eight appendices, is available to those who apply for it to the publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

"You know, I told you about Mrs. O'Sullivan's watermelon party?"

"To be sure. Der melons vhas all green, and eaferybody has colic."

"Yes, but neither the barber's wife nor the Countess Divito found that out. They looked upon it as the greatest social event of the season, and of course they wanted to return the snub. It was the countess who made the first move. She got up a straw ride."

"Und vhat vhas it?" queried the grocer.

"Well, you fill a wagon box with fresh straw and then fill up with people. They sit on the straw, you know. It's supposed to be the harvest dance, a husking bee, an apple paring and a spelling bee all in one and is considered very swagger. You know what swagger is, of course?"

"It vhas you swell outd und be werry smart."

"That's it. Well, the countess gave a straw ride and invited twenty people. The barber's wife was one, but Mrs. O'Sullivan was left out, and it almost broke her heart. She came to me with tears in her eyes and said:

"'But the idea of it, Mr. Sprocket, and me brought up under a straw stack, as it were.'"

Crowd Became Hilarious.

"The guests were treated to root beer before they started, and then the wagon drove up and down twenty-seven different alleys and passed all the boiler shops and slaughter houses in town. They stopped somewhere and loaded up with pop, and they were a hilarious crowd when they got home at midnight. You know what an unqualified success is, don't you?"

"Of course. He vhas a success mit-out any water in it."

"Exactly. That's what this was, and Mrs. O'Sullivan lambasted her goat, walloped her man and licked her children before taking to her bed. The straw ride was the talk of the block, and it got into the papers among the latest social events. Even the undertaker around the corner, who never notices anybody unless there's a casket goes with it, came around in a couple of days to congratulate the countess."

"Und dat vhas all?" anxiously queried the grocer.

"Oh, no," replied the janitor. "You see, the barber's wife had a score to pay off. She felt that she must deal the O'Sullivans a second hard blow. It wouldn't do to have another straw

STOPPIN' A SNEEZE.

Why Pressure Upon Either Lip Will Halt the Noisy Spasm.

When the feeling comes over us which always precedes a sneeze all we have to do is to lay our finger across the upper lip, directly beneath the nose, and press firmly upon the lip for a few seconds. The same result can be obtained by laying the finger across the lower lip, just above the chin, and pressing rather firmly for a few moments. Either of these acts will not attract the attention of any person, and in almost every instance the person will be saved the annoyance of disturbing the entire audience.

The physiological reason for this seemingly curious interference in nature is quite interesting, although but few stop to reason why in this as in many other things.

The internal surface of the nasal passages is covered by a very delicate and sensitive mucous membrane. The surface is quite extensive, following as it does all the inequalities produced by the curved spongy bones of the nose. Only in the upper portion is the seat of smell, as that part only receives branches from the first pair of cranial nerves or the nerve known as the olfactory nerve, which is the one of smell. The distribution of this nerve in the form of an intricate network is upon the two upper spongy bones.

The olfactory nerve itself does not issue from the skull, but rests upon a thin facial bone which separates it from the cavity of the nose, and the many branches which proceed from it pass through this bone by means of radial nerves of the nerve known as the olfactory nerve, which is the one of smell. The distribution of this nerve in the form of an intricate network is upon the two upper spongy bones.

The olfactory nerve itself does not issue from the skull, but rests upon a thin facial bone which separates it from the cavity of the nose, and the many branches which proceed from it pass through this bone by means of numerous small openings. The many nerves which ramify over the lower portions of the delicate nasal membranes and which endow it with sensibility to touch and pain are branches of what is known as the fifth pair of nerves.

An irritation from several causes applied to the parts where this nerve is distributed occasions sneezing, which is a spasmodic contraction of the diaphragm, which results in the expulsion of the irritating cause. The pressure described above simply arrests the irritation, and the sensation dies without the outburst of air which produces the unpleasant sound. It is like crossed wires or some outside influence.

There are times when this method does not work, but they are rare and generally due to the fact that the pressure is not applied soon enough. Nearly every one has a warning of several moments that he is about to sneeze. If the pressure is instantly applied the sneeze is generally suppressed; otherwise it may be too late.

This does not mean that every sneeze should be suppressed. Only do this when in church or theatre or some such place. To sneeze aside from the sneeze caused by a cold is natural and affords a relief to the nasal passages from dust.

The Siege of The Seven Suitors

By
MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright, 1910, by Meredith Nicholson

"You are a clever man, Mr. Ames, and I have every confidence that you will not only solve the mystery of the library chimney, but find the ghost that switched off the lights on the stair last night. I prefer that you should accomplish these feats without any help from the plans. I myself have no suggestions. I am gratified that you are meeting the emergencies that have arisen here with so much determination, but it is what I should expect of the son of Arnold Ames of Hartford. Opportunity is all that any of us need to find ourselves truly great, and if in the ordinary course of our lives the gate does not open freely we are justified in picking the lock. When I determined to seek adventures in my old age, I resolved that I should miss no chance and that I should be prepared for any beckoning of the hand of fate. An odd fancy struck me at the beginning of my new life that Boston would some day be the starting point of some interesting experience. This has not yet developed, but in order that I may be prepared for anything that may occur I keep a blue silk umbrella constantly checked at the Parker House. The presence of the little brass check in my purse is a constant reminder that Boston may one day call me."

A discussion of the Parker House umbrella followed. Cecilia and I joining, and it proved so fruitful a topic that it carried us to our coffee.

Three suitors were announced a little later, and I slipped away without excuses, while Miss Octavia and Cecilia adjourned to the library.

The ghost, I had sworn, should not baffle me another night.

As I crossed the second floor hall I passed the Swedish maid walking toward Miss Octavia's room. I was somewhat annoyed to find on looking over my shoulder to make sure of her destination that she, too, had paused, her hand on Miss Octavia's door, and was watching me with interest. She vanished immediately, but to throw her off the track I went to my own room, closed the door noisily and then came out quickly and ran up to the third floor.

Bassford Hollister's mysterious exit had lingered in my mind as the most curious incident of the eventful Friday night. Having been baffled in my effort to get hold of the architect's plans, my thought now was to await in the upper part of the house a repetition of the various phenomena that had so puzzled me. By the process of exclusion I had eliminated nearly every plausible theory, but if the ghost manifested himself with any sort of periodicity (and the hour of the chimney's queer behavior had been mine) I was now prepared to meet him in the regions he had chosen for his exploits.

speaking, put my foot to the mysterious stair, I would not turn back, and I continued on down the steps.

Great was my astonishment to find that I had apparently stepped from a new into an old house. The stair treads were worn by long use, the plaster walls that enclosed them were battered and cracked, and I seemed to have plunged from the glory of Hopefield into some dim lost passage of a domicile of another era that lay within or beneath the walls of the Manor. As I slowly descended, holding high my candle, I recalled, not without a qualm, the story of the British soldier, whom tradition or superstition linked to the site of Miss Hollister's property.

At the foot of the stair I found two rooms, one on either side of a small hall, and these also were clearly part of an old house that seemed to be somehow merged into the Hollister mansion. I remembered now that the mansion stood wedged against a rough spur of rock and that the front and rear entrances were upon different levels, and it was conceivable that the back part of the mansion might inclose these rooms of an earlier house occupying the same site. Why they should have been retained was beyond me.

Through the carefully preserved windows, many paned and quaint, of these hidden rooms the infolding walls of the new house were blank and black.

One door only remained in this shell of the old house, and I hastened to fling it open, still lighting my way with a candle. Before me lay the coal cellar, at which I had merely glanced on the morning after my installation at Hopefield. I now began to get my bearings. I remembered two iron lids in the cemented surface of an area on the east side of the house where fuel was deposited, and, mounting a few steps that were of recent construction and had evidently been built to afford communication between the remnant of the old house and the subterranean portion of the new, I found to my relief and satisfaction beneath one of these openings a short ladder, through which the court might be reached. Here, then, the manner of ghostly ingress was illustrated by perfectly plausible means. The lid of the coal hole was entirely withdrawn, and a bar of moonlight lay brightening upon a pile of anthracite at the foot of the ladder.

CHAPTER XV.

I Discover Two Ghosts.

The ghost I believed to be still in the upper halls of the house, and now that I was in a position to watch the ladder by which he had entered I felt confident that I had cut off his retreat. I was surveying the cellar when I heard faint sounds in a new direction. Far away under the house and remote from the secret steps some one was moving toward me, and rapidly too! The ghost that I believed to have disappeared into the fourth floor hall must then have changed the line of his retreat and descended by one of the regular stairways.

I blew out my candle and stood with my back to the wall of the long corridor on which opened the various store-rooms, the heating plant, laundry and other accessories of the modern house. My ghost was coming in haste—a haste that did not harmonize with the stately tread of the spooks of popular superstition. A slower pace and I should doubtless have fled before him, but quick, light steps echoed in the dark corridor, and I gathered courage from the thought that ghosts create echoes no more than the cast shadows.

As the steps drew nearer I prepared shoulders lay across its threshold. He sighed deeply, bringing my dazed wits back to him, and I found myself gazing into the blinking eyes of Lord Arrowood.

"Bounders, I say. Bounders!" he gasped.

"In the circumstances, Lord Arrowood, I should not call names. Will you tell me what you mean by running through this house in this fashion? Stand up and give an account of yourself."

I helped him to his feet and bent over the stair rail leading down to the third floor. Evidently our strange transactions beneath and above had not disturbed the assembled suitors and their hostesses, but in common decency Lord Arrowood must be disposed of promptly. There was no doubt about that.

"I was an ass to try it," muttered his lordship, ruffling his tie into shape. "And now I want to get out. I want to go away from here."

He was tugging at the belt of his Norfolk coat, and something between it and his waistcoat evidently gave him concern. Our conversation was carried on in half whispers. He was so crestfallen that if it hadn't been for the necessity of maintaining silence I should have laughed outright.

"Out with it, my lord. What have you stuck in your coat?"

"They're bounders, all the rest of 'em," he asserted doggedly. "but I believe you to be a gentleman."

"I thank you, Lord Arrowood, for this mark of confidence. Open your coat! I declare that even if you have lifted a bit of the Hollister plate I will let you go."

Reluctantly, shamefacedly and still breathing hard from his late exertions, Lord Arrowood of Arrowood, Hants, England, obeyed me. There were five buttons to the close fitting jacket, and the loosening of every succeeding one seemed to give him pain. Then, with his head slightly lifted as though in disdain of me, he held out for my observation a pie, in the pan in which it had been baked. The top crust was browned to a

He stepped down before me the dark stairway, and I closed door after me and followed him found my way to the pie pantry out difficulty, returned the goose pie to its proper shelf, chose an pie and gave it, with a five note, to Lord Arrowood.

At the bottom of the ladder pressed my hand feelingly and pressed his gratitude in terms would have touched a harder than mine. Then, having close coal hole and hidden the ladder a pile of wood, I resumed pursuit of the ghost.

I lighted my way with a candle through the lost chambers of the house, up the hidden stairway out into the fourth floor hall. The old stair, I found on close observation, reached only from second to the fourth floor and this had been pieced with it carefully preserved from the house. There was nothing so strange after all about the hidden stair though I was convinced that I had been no idea of Pepperton's, but he had merely obeyed the order his eccentric client, the umbrella dyspepsia cure millionaire.

I had no sooner let myself through the secret door into the upper than I was aware of a disturbance in the library below. I heard exclamations from the men, and as I down toward the third floor Octavia's voice rose above the mult.

"We must have patience, gentlemen. Chimneys are subject to just like human beings, and we fortunate in having in the house gentleman who is an expert in matters."

"If you wait for that man to your chimney you will wait doomsday."

So spake John Stewart Dick, to his vengeance of me with my and hostess. I might have forgiven him, but I could not forgive H Wiggins.

"He doesn't know any more chimneys than the man in moon," my old friend was saying between coughs.

And then quite unmistakably smelt smoke, and bending to over the rail and peering down stair well I saw smoke pouring the library into the hall. It seemed to be in greater volume tonight at previous manifestations. A blue cloud was filling the lower and rising toward me. I ran quickly to the third floor, to the chamber whose fire place was served by library chimney. The lights in third floor hall winked out as I closed the door. I heard a step somewhere, but I did not trouble about this. The switch inside the used guest chamber responded silently to my touch, and on kneeling the hearth I found it cold as I expected. There was absolutely no way of choking the library fire await in the upper part of the house a repetition of the various phenomena that had so puzzled me. By the process of exclusion I had eliminated nearly every plausible theory, but if the ghost manifested himself with any sort of periodicity (and the hour of the chimney's queer behavior had been mine) I was now prepared to meet him in the regions he had chosen for his exploits.

I had a pretty accurate knowledge by this time of the position and function of all the electric switches between the lower hall and the fourth floor, but I tested them as I ascended, glancing down now and then to make sure I was not observed. From the sound of voices in the library I judged that most of Cecilia's suitors must now have arrived, and so much the better, I argued, for, with Miss Octavia and her niece fully occupied, I could the better carry on my ghost hunt above stairs.

At a quarter before 9 I switched off the lights on the third and fourth floors and established myself at the head of the stairway and quite near the trunk room door. This door I had opened, as I fancied that if Bassford Hollister was at the bottom of the business he would probably wish to find his way to the roof again. So far, I was able to manage it the stage was in readiness for the entrance of the goblin.

The clock below struck 9, and almost upon the last stroke I heard a sound that set my nerves tingling. I crouched in the dark, waiting. Some one was coming toward me, but from where? The bottom of a well at midnight was not blacker than the fourth floor, but the switch lay ready to my hand and my pockets were stuffed with matches of the sort that light anywhere. The stairways were all carpeted, as I have said, and yet some one was ascending bare treads, lightly and with delays that suggested a furtive purpose. Meanwhile, as a background for this unreality, murmurs of talk and occasional laughter rose from the library.

This concealed stairway, wherever it was, could not be of interminable length, and I had counted, I think, fifteen steps of that strange ascent when it ceased. I heard a fumbling as of some one seeking a latch, and suddenly a light current of air swept by me, but its clean fresh quality was not in itself disturbing. I stooped and struck a match smartly on the carpet and at the same time clicked the switch. I should say that not more than ten seconds passed from the moment the soft rush of air had first advertised the opening of a passage near me until the hall was flooded with the glow of the electric lamps overhead. My match had also performed its office, but, finding the electric current behaving itself normally, I blew it out. What I saw now interested me immensely.

In the solid wall near the stair and almost directly opposite the trunk room a narrow door had swung outward—a neat contrivance, so light in its construction that it still swayed on its concealed hinges from the touch of the hand that had released it. How it had opened or what had become of the prowler who had unlatched it remained to be discovered. It seemed impossible that whoever or whatever had climbed the hidden stairway had descended, nor had I been conscious of a ghostly passing as on the previous night. I had only my senses to apply to this problem, and their efficiency was minimized for a moment by fear.

The opening in the wall engaged my attention at once, and I was steadied by the thought that here was a practical matter susceptible of investigation. I stepped within the door and lighted a candle, and just as the wick caught fire click went a switch somewhere and out went the hall lamps. But, having, so to modern house. My ghost was coming in haste—a haste that did not harmonize with the stately tread of the spooks of popular superstition. A slower pace and I should doubtless have fled before him, but quick, light steps echoed in the dark corridor, and I gathered courage from the thought that ghosts create echoes no more than the cast shadows.

As the steps drew nearer I prepared myself to spring upon him. I must unconsciously have taken a step, for he paused suddenly, stood still for a moment, then turned and scampered back the way he had come. After him I went as fast as I could run. The cement paved corridor was four or five feet wide, and I plunged through the dark at my best speed. At the end of the corridor I was pretty certain of my quarry, and I made ready to grapple with him. Then as I plunged into the wall my hands touched a man's face and for a moment clutched the collar of his coat. He had been waiting for me to strike the wall, and as he slipped out of my grasp he ran back toward the coal cellar. I had struck the wall with a force that knocked the wind out of me, but I got myself together with the loss of only an instant and renewed pursuit. I had no fear but that if he attempted to reach the open by means of the coal hole I should catch him on the ladder, and I sprinted for all I was worth to make sure of him.

My fleeting grasp of the man's collar and the agility with which he slipped from my grasp had settled the ghost question, and I had now resolved that the intruder was only a common thief.

As I reached the old stairway he was mounting it two steps at a time, as I judged from the sound. I had hoped to catch and dispose of him without alarming the house, but it seemed inevitable now that the chase would end in such fashion as to arouse the company assembled in the library.

I heard him stumble and fall headlong at the door above. Then he shot off into the still darkened hall, and when I had gained the top I lost track of him for a moment. I paused and was about to strike a match when he resumed his flight, and I was forced to grapple with the fact that some one else was pursuing him. I held my match unstruck upon this new disclosure and stepped back within the concealed doors and waited. Up and down the hall two persons were running, and when they reached the ends of the corridor I heard hands touch the wall and the sound of dodging, and then almost instantly the two runners flashed by me again. The hall was so dark that I saw nothing, but as the runners hurried past the door I felt the rush of air caused by their flight.

Three or four times this had happened, and then, still without having made a light, I thrust out my foot at the next return of the unseen runners. Some one tripped and fell headlong, and I promptly flung myself upon him.

My prisoner's resistance engaged my best attention a moment, but when I had sat upon his legs and got hold of his struggling hands some one stole softly by me. My prisoner, too, heard and was attentive. Not only did I experience the same sensation as on the previous night of a passing near by, but I was conscious of the same faint perfume, as of a flower scent half caught in a garden at night, that had added to my mystification before. Then without the slightest warning the lights flashed on and a door closed somewhere, but it was not the hidden one leading down into the remnant of the old house, for my prisoner's head and tions, Lord Arrowood of Arrowood, Hants, England, obeyed me. There were five buttons to the close fitting jacket, and the loosening of every succeeding one seemed to give him pain. Then, with his head slightly lifted as though in disdain of me, he held out for my observation a pie, in the pan in which it had been baked. The top crust was browned to a nicety. Its edges were crimped neatly, and, in spite of the fact that I had so lately dined sumptuously at Miss Hollister's hospitable board, at sight of this alluring pastry I experienced the sharp twinges of aroused appetite.

"Now you have it, and I hope you are satisfied," said Lord Arrowood. "Kindly allow me to retire by the way I came."

"First," I replied, sobered by the gravity of his manner, "it would interest me as a student of character to know just what species of pie lured you to this burglarious deed."

"I have reason to think," he answered, with tears in his eyes, "that it is a gooseberry. I was hungry, if you must know the truth, and, having sampled the old lady's pies this morning, with nothing to eat since, I saw the coal hole open and ladder beneath, and the rest of it was easy. If you and the other chap hadn't chased me all over the estate I'd been off with my pie and no harm done. The old lady's insane, you know, and has no manner of use for pies. The house is haunted in the bargain. When you had about winded me down in the cellar and cut me off from the ladder and chased me up here the ghost took a hand, and if you hadn't tripped me and sat on me the spirits would certainly have nailed me. O Lord, what a night!"

"You are sure you speak the truth when you say that the coal hole was open and that you found the ladder there when you came?"

"No manner of doubt of it. As I have already said, I believe you to be a gentleman, and between gentlemen certain confidences may pass that wouldn't be possible between a gentleman and those cattle down there."

He jerked his head scornfully to indicate the suitors below.

I bowed with such dignity as is possible when addressing a nobleman whom you have just caught in the act of lifting a gooseberry pie from a lady's pantry—a pie which you hold perforce in your hands.

"The fact is that I was without the price of food, and, to repeat, I was beastly hungry."

"Poverty and hunger, my lord, are pardonable sins, but gooseberry pastries are sacred to Hazekiah. My impressions of Hazekiah are the pleasantest, and I cannot allow you to intervene between her and the pie I hold in my hands. If you will accompany me below I will undertake to gain access to the pie vault, return this pie to its proper place and hand you at the foot of the ladder an apple pie in place of it. I dare say it never will be missed, but from what I know of Hazekiah any trifling with her appetite would be a crime indictable at common law."

His lordship seemed reassured, and we were about to descend by the concealed stair when he arrested me.

into the room. I took one step and then cautiously another until the whole of the trunk room was well within range of my vision.

And there, seated on a prodigious trunk frescoed with labels of a dozen foreign inns, I beheld Hezekiah!

Lady's Slipper.

"Well, Miss Hezekiah," I said, "I half suspected you all along."

"Wise chimney man! You were a little slow about it though."

"I was indeed. You gave me a run for my money."

She finished her cracker at the third bite, shoved her hands together to free them of possible crumbs and was about to speak when she jumped lightly from the trunk, bent her head toward the door, and then stepped back again and faced me imperturbably.

"And now that you've found me, Mr. Chimney Man, the joke's on you after all."

"Do you mean to say that you have really found traces of the ghost?"

"Not only that, Miss Hollister, but I have met the ghost face to face—even more, I have had speech with him!"

Her face brightened, her eyes flashed. It was plain that she was immensely pleased.

"And are you able to say from your encounter, that he is in fact a British subject, uneasily haunting this house in America long after the Declaration of Independence and Washington's farewell address have passed into literature?"

"You have never spoken a truer word, Miss Hollister; but, by means which I am not at liberty to disclose, I have persuaded him not to visit this house again."

"Then," said Miss Hollister, "I cannot do less than express my gratitude, though I regret that you did not first allow me to meet him. Still, I dare say that we shall find his bones buried somewhere beneath my foundations. Please assure me that such is your expectation."

"Tomorrow, Miss Hollister, I shall take pleasure in showing you certain hidden chambers in this house which I venture to say will afford you great pleasure. I have tonight discovered a link between the mansion, as you know it and an earlier house whose timbers may indeed hide the bones of that British soldier."

"And as for the chimney?"

"And as for the chimney, I give you my word as a professional man that it will never annoy you again, and I therefore beg that you dismiss the subject from your mind."

I saw that she was about to recur to the shoe she held in her hand and at which she glanced frequently with a quizzical expression. This, clearly, was an issue that must be met promptly, and I knew of no better way than by lying. Hezekiah herself had plainly stated on the morning of that long, eventful day, when she walked into the breakfast room in her aunt's absence and explained Cecilia's trip to town, that it was perfectly fair to dissimulate in making explanations to Miss Hollister. that, in fact, Miss Octavia enjoyed nothing better than the injection of fiction into the affairs of the matter of fact day. Here, then, was my opportunity.

"Miss Hollister," I began boldly, "the slipper you hold in your hand belongs to me, and if you have no immediate use for it I beg that you allow me to relieve you of it."

"It is yours, Mr. Ames?"

A lifting of the brows, a widening of the eyes, denoted Miss Octavia's polite surprise.

"Beyond any question it is my property," I asserted.

"Your words interest me greatly, Mr. Ames. As you know, the grim hard life of the twentieth century falls upon me, and I am deeply interested in everything that pertains to adventure and romance. Tell me more, if you are free to do so, of this slipper which I now return to you."

I received Hezekiah's worn little pump into my hands as though it were an object of high consecration.

this emergency. Then I boldly attacked the bell of the house from which I believed the slipper to have proceeded. I rang until a policeman, whose speech was fragrant of the Irish coasts, bade me desist, informing me that the family had only the previous day left for the shore. The house, he assured me, was utterly vacant. That, Miss Hollister, is all there is of the story. But ever since I have carried that slipper with me. It was in my pocket tonight as I traversed the upper halls of your house, seeking the ghost of that British soldier, and I had just discovered my loss when I heard you calling. In returning it you have conferred upon me the greatest imaginable favor. I have faith that some time, somewhere, I shall find the owner of that slipper. Would you not infer from its diminutive size and the fine suggestive delicacy of its outlines, that the owner is a person of aristocratic lineage and of breeding? I will confess that nothing is nearer my heart than the hope that one day I shall meet the young lady—I am sure she must be young—who wore that slipper and dropped it, as it seemed, from the clouds at my feet there in sedate Beacon street, that most solemn of residential sanctuaries."

"Mr. Ames," began Miss Kollister instantly, with an assumed severity that her smile belied, "I cannot recall that my niece Hezekiah ever visited in Beacon street, yet I dare say that if she had done so and a young man of your pleasing appearance had passed beneath her window one of her slippers might very easily have become detached from Hezekiah's foot and fallen with a nice calculation directly in front of you. But now, Mr. Ames, will you kindly carry your candle into that trunk room?"

The foundations of the world shook as I remembered the compact by which Hezekiah was excluded from the house and realized what her impending discovery would mean to Cecilia, her father, and the wayward Hezekiah too. But I was in for it. Miss Octavia indicated by an imperious nod that I was to precede her into the trunk room, and I strode before her with my candle held high.

But the sprites of mystery were still abroad at Hopefield. The room was unoccupied save for the trunks. Hezekiah had vanished. Instead of sitting there to await the coming of her aunt, she had silently departed without leaving a trace. Miss Hollister glanced up at the trapdoor in the ceiling, and so did I. It was closed, but I had no doubt that Hezekiah had crawled through it and taken herself to the roof. Miss Octavia would probably order me at once to the battlements, but worse was to come.

"Mr. Ames," she said, "will you kindly lift the lid of that largest trunk?"

I had not thought of this, and I shuddered at the possibilities.

She indicated the trunk upon which Hezekiah had sat and nibbled her cracker not more than ten minutes before. Could it be possible that when I lifted the cover that golden head would be found beneath? My life has known no blacker moment than that in which I flung back the lid of that trunk. I averted my eyes in dread of the impending disclosure and held the candle close.

But the trunk was empty, incredibly empty! My courage rose again, and I glanced at Miss Octavia triumphantly. I even jerked out the trays to allay any lingering suspicion. Why had I ever doubted Hezekiah? Who was she, the golden haired daughter door. I heard a step behind me, but I did not trouble this. The switch inside the unquest chamber responded readily to my touch, and on kneeling by the switch I found it cold as I had expected. There was absolutely no fire in the library flue at that time, for, as I had established, all the fireplaces in this chimney had their independent flues.

Half outside was still dark, and I did not try the switch. The pur was better carried on in darkness and I had by this time become accustomed to rapid locomotion through unlighted passages. I leaned the stair well and heard exclamations of surprise at the sudden onset of the smoke, which had fully abated as abruptly as it began. The windows and doors were opened and the company turned to the library.

"An extraordinary—really quite cable!" they were saying before I heard Cecilia's light laughter and the odd ways of the chimney were revealed. And as I stood thus peering and listening the Swedish blond head appeared below the railing over the well rail on the floor. She, too, was taking an interest in the library, and as she lifted her head her eyes met mine. Then while I stared at each other the floor lights went out with an abruptness, and as I craned my neck to peer into the blackness I experienced once more the passing of some light, only to find it wildly with my hands, seemed to be caught away from me then as I fought the air it brushed my cheek again. Then sudden prompting I stole swiftly to the fourth floor, lighted my candle and gazed about. I thought it let the electric light alone, for I had once too often plunged into darkness at critical moments, and my hands were not to his trickery.

The hall was perfectly quiet. The reading down the hidden stair was invisible, and I had not yet known how it might be opened from below, though Bassford Hollister undoubtedly left the house by the roof. And reminded of that, I opened the trunk room and peered in. The candle light

"A slipper which I now return to you." Mr. Chimney Man, the joke's on you after all."

She laid her hand on the door and swung it nearly shut. I had heard what she had heard. Miss Octavia was coming upstairs. She had exchanged a few words with the Swedish maid on the second floor landing, and Hezekiah's quick ear had heard her. But Hezekiah's equanimity was disconcerting. Even with her aunt close at hand she showed not the slightest alarm. She resumed her seat on the trunk, and her heel thumped it tranquilly.

"The joke's on you, Mr. Chimney Man, because now that you've caught me playing tricks you've got to get me out of trouble."

"What if I don't?" "Oh, nothing," she answered indifferently, looking me squarely in the eye.

"But your aunt would make no end of a row, and you would cause your sister to lose out with Miss Octavia. As I understand it, you're pledged to keep off the reservation. It was part of the family agreement."

"Mr. Ames, if you are ghost hunting in this part of the house"—

It was Miss Octavia's voice. She was seeking me and would no doubt find me. The sequestration of Hezekiah became now an urgent and delicate matter.

"You caught me," said Hezekiah calmly, "and now you've got to get me out, and I wish you good luck, and, besides, I lost one of my shoes somewhere, and you've got to find that."

In proof of her statement she submitted a shoeless, brown stockinged foot for my observation.

"The one I lost was like this," and Hezekiah thrust forth a neat tan pump rather the worse for wear. "I was on the second floor a bit ago," she began, "and lost my slipper."

"In what mischief, pray?"

"Mr. Ames," called Miss Octavia, her voice close at hand.

"I wanted to see something in Cecilia's room, so I opened her door and walked in—that's all," Hezekiah replied.

"Wicked Hezekiah! Coming into the house is bad enough in all the circumstances. Entering your sister's room is a grievous sin."

"If, Mr. Ames, you are still seeking an explanation of that chimney's behavior"—

It was Miss Octavia, now just outside the door.

"Don't leave that trunk, Hezekiah," I whispered. "I'll do the best I can."

Miss Octavia met me smilingly as I faced her in the hall. She had switched on the lights, and my candle burned yellowly in the white electric glow.

Miss Octavia held something in her hand. It required no second glance to tell me that she had found Hezekiah's slipper.

"Mr. Ames," she began, "as you have absented yourself from the library all evening I assume that you have been busy studying my chimneys and seeking for the ghost of that British soldier who was so wantonly slain upon the site of this house."

"I am glad to say that not only is your surmise correct, Miss Hollister, but that I have made great progress in both directions."

"I received Hezekiah's worn little pump into my hands as though it were an object of high consecration. "As I am nothing if not frank, Miss Hollister, I will confess to you that this shoe came into my possession in a very curious way. One day last spring I was in Boston, having been called there on professional business. In the evening I left my hotel for a walk, crossed the common, took a turn through the public garden, where many devoted lovers adorned the benches, and then strolled aimlessly along Beacon street."

"I was passing a house which I have not since been able to identify exactly, though I have several times revisited Boston in the hope of doing so, when suddenly and without any warning whatever this slipper dropped at my feet. All the houses in the neighborhood seemed deserted, with windows and doors tightly boarded, and my closest scrutiny failed to discover any opening from which that slipper might have been flung. The region is so decorous and acts of violence are so foreign to its dignity and repose that I could scarce believe that I held that bit of tan leather in my hand. Nor did its unaccountable precipitation into the street seem the act of a housemaid, nor could I believe that a nursery governess had thus sought diversion from the roof above. I hesitated for a moment, not knowing how to meet than that in which I flung back the lid of that trunk. I averted my eyes in dread of the impending disclosure and held the candle close.

But the trunk was empty, incredibly empty! My courage rose again, and I glanced at Miss Octavia triumphantly. I even jerked out the trays to allay any lingering suspicion. Why had I ever doubted Hezekiah? Who was she, the golden haired daughter of kings, to be caught in a trunk? She had slipped up the ladder while I talked to her aunt and I was even now hiding on the roof, but it was not for me to make so treasonable a suggestion. Miss Octavia might press the matter further if she liked, but I would not help her to trap Hezekiah.

Miss Hollister did not, to my surprise and relief, suggest an inspection of the roof. She nodded her head gravely and passed out into the hall.

"Oh," said the milkman, who has just been graduated from Purdue and is not to be stumped by any Butter college pedagogue, "their sustenance is wholly of vegetable origin, rich in chlorophyll and opulent in butyrous qualities."

"A pint, if you please," said the professor.

"Git up," said the milkman.—Indianapolis News.

The explosion of gunpowder is divided into three distinct stages, called the ignition, inflammation and combustion. The ignition is the setting on fire of the first grain, while the inflammation is the spreading of the flame over the surface of the powder from the point of ignition. Combustion is the burning up of each grain. The value of gunpowder is due to the fact that when subjected to sufficient heat it becomes a gas which expands with frightful rapidity. The so called explosion that takes place when a match is touched to gunpowder is merely a chemical change, during which there is a sudden evolution of gases from the original solid. It has been calculated that ordinary gunpowder on exploding expands about 9,000 times or fills a space this much larger as a gas than when in a solid form.

Mark Twain Liked Girls.

Mark Twain, although the creator of the most lovable boy in literature, Tom Sawyer, was really more interested in little girls, and it was through his interest and affection for my little daughter Helen that we came to know him so well and to share the last months of his life. He used to pretend that only girls were interesting, that boys ought not to exist until they were men. The fact was, he really was interested in any young creature. In one of the books he gave Helen he wrote, "It is better to be a young June beetle than an old bird of paradise."—Marion Schuyler Allen in Strand Magazine.

Catching Cold.

Wet feet or clothes "give us cold" because the evaporation absorbs the heat so rapidly from the surface of the body that its temperature is lowered beneath the normal, thereby straining the organs of the body and resulting in what we call a cold.

Water Safety.

In Massachusetts all streams of water unsuited for drinking must be marked so that the fact cannot be overlooked.

QUEER GREETINGS.

Tribes That Spit Upon or Weep Over Their Visitors.

Among the Masai and Ukerewe it is a mark of respect to greet an acquaintance or a stranger by spitting at him. Almost as strange is the custom ascribed to the Tibetans of sticking out the tongue by way of salutation. Rubbing noses is quite common; the Burmese and many tribes of Eskimos, Laplanders and Malays do so.

Stranger than any of these customs is the weeping salutation that has been observed among central South American Indians. This form of greeting occurs, too, in the Andaman islands, New Zealand and Polynesia. A Portuguese explorer describes the custom as he saw it used among a tribe of South American Indians:

"Whenever a guest enters a hut he is immediately honored and made welcome by being wept over. Without a word being spoken he is led to the hammock. As soon as he is seated the hostess and her daughters and any of their girl friends who happen to be in the house at the time come and sit about the guest, touch him lightly with their fingers and commence to weep loudly and to shed many tears. During this ceremony, in a sort of connected discourse, they recite everything that has happened to them recently and talk of the hardships of the road that the visitor has suffered and of anything and everything that can arouse compassion and tears. The guest, his hand before his face, pretends to weep and does not speak until the crying has gone on for some time. Then they all wipe away their tears and become as lively and merry as if they had never cried in all their lives."—Exchange.

ELEPHANTS IN A TEMPER.

When Enraged They Are Apt to Tear Their Victims to Pieces.

An elephant uses several original and effective methods of exterminating its victims. It may rush upon a man, seize him in its trunk, beat him to death on the ground and before leaving tear up the foliage for yards about.

There are many instances of elephants literally tearing their victims to pieces. The story is told of an English official in Uganda who on noticing a "safari" passing stepped to the door to inquire of the head man the whereabouts of his master. In response the black swung a human arm before the official and replied that a few days previous his master had been torn to pieces by an elephant and that he had brought back the arm in proof of his assertion.

Then again after knocking a man down an elephant will often continue on its course without stopping to learn how much damage it has done. A hunter who was within close proximity of a herd of elephants handed his rifle to the gun bearer and started to climb a tree to look about. At that moment an elephant charged from the tall grass and made for the gun bearer. As the man started to run he threw up his arms, and in some manner the elephant in reaching for him snatched the rifle from his hand and stopped to hammer it on the ground, while the black made good his escape.—J. Alden Loring in Outing.

RUINED THE PAINTING.

Curious Fate of Burne-Jones' Favorite Water Color.

A very curious history is that of Burne-Jones' favorite picture, "Love Among the Ruins." The original picture was in water color and was sent to Paris by a firm of art publishers for reproduction and in that city forwarded to their photographic studios in the suburbs. The picture unhappily preceded the letter of instructions regarding it warning the photographer of the medium in which it was painted, so that immediately on its arrival it was brushed over with white of egg to bring out the colors for photographing—an excellent procedure in the case of oil pictures, harmless and very efficacious.

But, as to the Burne-Jones picture, Love was very soon among his own ruins, for every swish of the brush brought off the final touches and left a mere smeared ground. Sir Edward Burne-Jones was heartbroken at the loss of a work on which his reputation, he considered, would in great measure rest and on which he had spent many months of patient toil and the very perfection of his execution in the realization of one of the most poetic conceptions that had sprung from his fanciful imagination.

"Love Among the Ruins" was painted during the years 1870-3. In October, 1893, it was destroyed, and by the following year the oil version was finished, but was scarcely a consolation to the artist for the loss of his first and more spontaneous work.

ANIMALS IN OPERA.

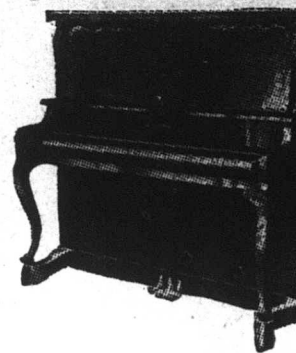

Some of Them Raised Up Their Voices With Weird Effect.

Few persons realize how many animals appear in opera. By this I do not mean such animals as the tenor who played the part of Lohengrin and was told by Von Bulow that he was the knight of the swine rather than of the swan, but real bona fide animals. They extend all the way from Monteverde to Wagner.

About A. D. 1600 it was not unusual to have lions or elephants upon the operatic stage. One can never tell what these animals may improvise in their parts. I know of a case where an elephant caused a most hasty exit of the orchestra in London long ago, when the father of B. E. Woolf, the Boston critic, was conducting.

The donkey in Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci" has not a speaking part, yet once that I know of he lifted up his voice and made Canio's great solo an unexpected duet. Belami himself was not more astonished than was the tenor on that occasion.

In spite of the saying, "Thou shalt not yoke the ox and the ass together," Pierne caused these two to sing a duet in "The Children of Bethlehem." On this occasion the ass was a tenor, but I do not believe that Pierne meant any reflection upon the high voiced fraternity.—Louis C. Elson in Musical Observer.

How the Mouse Escaped

One night a wise old mouse came down the garden path. Perhaps he was looking for the moon. But he was hidden behind the barn.

Buzz, the cat, was sitting before the currant bush. When the mouse came by he pounced upon him.

"Ah, my fine fellow!" he purred. "I will eat you in a gray coat this time."

Then he climbed to the roof of the barn and took the wise old mouse by the tail.

The mouse began a little, low song.

"Why do you sing?" mewed the cat, putting him down on the roof, with his paw upon his back.

"I always sing at this time of the moon," squeaked the mouse. "I should be happy to have you sing with me."

This pleased Buzz, who was very hungry. He stretched up his neck, as if to catch the mouse at the moon, and to sing.

The wise mouse peeped softly. The cat was fond of his own voice and sang with all his might.

Then he took his paw from the mouse's back.

When the tune was done Buzz came down and saw only a hole in the wall.

A Set of Dainty Aluminum Jelly Moulds

An opportunity, like this, to get a set of stylish individual aluminum jelly moulds free will probably never occur again in your lifetime. This Free Offer is simply a quick way we've adopted to introduce

Shirriff's Jelly

You simply purchase three packages of Shirriff's Jelly Powder from the grocer. He will then give you, without any extra charge, three of these jelly moulds. Or he will give you the complete set of six different shapes with six packages.

Six packages merely provide a nice assortment of flavors—flavors that are fruity, well-pronounced. Shirriff's Jelly is high-class, delicious. You'll serve it often once you've commenced.

And individual jellies—a jelly for each person—make such attractive and fashionable table decorations that nothing less than the complete set will satisfy you. Especially will you want the set, because the moulds are in six different stylish designs, and because they are made of aluminum, which every well-informed woman knows is the world's best material for cooking utensils.

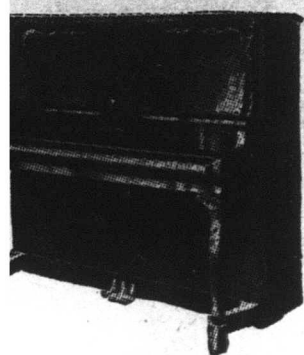

Your grocer is probably exhibiting the moulds and Shirriff's Jelly in his window to-day. Call or phone him at once.

10c. a package. 3 for 25c. 6 for 50c. One package makes six individual jellies. Especially delicious when served in combination with fresh or canned fruit, or with whipped cream.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

When the Little Sister of the Rich Economizes.

USES FOR OLD MACKINTOSH.

Points About the Woman Who Wears Expensive Clothes, but Never Looks Well Dressed—Vagaries of a Regular Customer.

Dear Elsa—The best place to see economy working overtime I have recently discovered is in the home of people blessed with a large share of this world's goods. They are, as a rule, more economical in the little things than those less endowed with wealth. Last week I spent with the M's, and you remember, dear, mother telling us years ago how "savin'" the older members of this family with gold galore used to be. Well, their descendants have inherited the same tendencies. The frugal mind is still apparent in the clan of today. How do I know? A fine object lesson was given by the daughter of the house.

One day during my stay Jack, Anne F.'s brother, found that he had quite outgrown his mackintosh. The coat was one of fine quality (they are too sensible and economical to buy anything but the best), but it was almost worn out—indeed, decidedly shabby in places. I myself should have thrown it away without a thought as being too far gone to do anything with, and I laughed heartily when Anne pounced upon the discarded garment like a hawk.

"Why, Anne," I said, "what on earth can you ever do with such a gone to pieces old mackintosh?"

"Well," she replied, "I was going to do something for myself with it, but since you are so skeptical about its usefulness I'm going to make some things for you out of it. There are lots of places that are quite good in it yet," she said, holding the old rag up admiringly for me to see. "Why, the entire back is almost as good as new."

I laughed again, but in spite of my discouraging rudeness Anne went to work and made for me—the skeptic—a wonderful bath apron to wear when I wash Comfy, our new Pomeranian dog, and a toilet bag with pockets in it for my suit case (it holds, each in its own compartment, toothbrush, comb, soap, wash cloths and other similar articles).

You see, dear, I had bragged a little to Anne before the mackintosh episode of what I had accomplished in the saving line. Since then I will have to look to my own laurels for efficiency in household economy. Dick says the F's have the laugh on me and attributes their happy financial condition to generations of economical forbears. Mine were notorious spendthrifts, and there are times when I thank heaven for it. I can plunge and then put the blame upon "inherited tendencies."

And, apropos of plunging, one does have to accelerate one's sartorial gait this season to be well dressed, for the chic thing is so expensively simple looking. But don't you think there are a lot of women, no matter how much they spend on clothes, who never

FASHIONS OF TODAY.

Blouses That Are Smart and Waistcoats That Are Ultra Modish.

There is a vast variety of separate white blouses this season, and it looks as though they were to be at the height of fashion again. One kind that is favored is made of a white wash material, which has a satiny surface. It is immensely broad, more so than you might think by mere reading, and the pear shaped sleeves fall to the hand, where they end in a point at the back. They make no pretense of fitting the wrist, and they are the only kind of sleeve which is loose at the wrist that has any grace.

But, after all, it is not the separate waists, but the bodices for one piece frocks, that one is especially interested in for the moment. It is these that have outgrown all their former dimensions. And, by the way, many of them are separate from the skirt, because the latter fastens in the back and the former in front. A waist that fastens down the back, except in a decollete gown, is most unusual. And in connection with waists the waistcoat takes a very prominent place this season. The models are borrowed from those worn by the mere man, but so modified that it is not the masculine article by any means. Illustrated is one of these little waistcoats of cherry poplin. It is worn with a black cloth costume and a white lace blouse and adds just the necessary color touch to the ensemble.

Money Saving Rules.

"The German housewife is not much given to troubling her head about the high cost of living and its causes. Rather," so writes a friend in the Vaterland, "she makes her expenditures correspond to her income. The less money she has the less she spends, and she smiles on placidly just the same."

But whether her income be large or small the good German hausfrau has certain fixed rules which are quite well worth quoting.

"Do your own buying and marketing."

TUMOR IN THE STOMACH

Completely Removed When She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBURY, ONT., April 4th, 1913. "Some years ago, I was sick in bed, and thought I was going to die. I had a growth in my stomach, which the doctors said was a tumor and they said that the only thing to do was to go to the hospital and have the tumor cut out. I dreaded an operation although both doctors said it was the only cure. I said I would die before being operated on.

At this time, my mother in Alvinston sent me some "Fruit-a-tives" and induced me to try them as she had heard of another woman who had been cured of a similar growth in the stomach by taking "Fruit-a-tives".

To please my mother, I began to take "Fruit-a-tives" with the happy result that they cured me. I have not been to see a doctor since and my health is first class.

I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" every time I get a chance and I will be glad to have you publish this letter as some other woman may now be a sufferer from the same trouble and "Fruit-a-tives" will cure her" Mrs. A. McDONALD.

WINDOW GARDEN

Now's the Time to Think of Your Indoor Plants.

COFFEE A GOOD TONIC

The Silvery Pink Tinted Petunias Are Beautiful and Hardy Growers—Liquid Fertilizer Often Found to Be an Effective Stimulant.

Now is the time not only to think of what you are going to have in your winter window garden, but to act on whatever decision you come to in rather prompt fashion.

Probably the most effective of all window plants are the cinerarias. Some think they are difficult to raise, but there are only a few general principles to be applied to them. They require a great deal more water than the primrose, and once a week at least they should be soaked for three hours in water that covers the pot. The reason for this is that their sturdy roots make such a complicated and intricate mat in the earth that water reaches them with difficulty from above.

The shades to be chosen depend entirely on the individual taste, though if one has many other brightly colored flowers in the window the white, blue and dull shades of red are easier toned in than those of the vivid magenta.

Cyclamen plants are exquisitely pretty with effective leaves and charming little flowers. In an east window with an average amount of water and sunshine they will bloom continually till well in the spring. Then some time the last of April take them

How the Mouse Escaped.

One night a wise old mouse crept by the garden path. Perhaps he was looking for the moon. But the moon was hidden behind the barn. The cat, who was sitting beneath a bush, saw the mouse. When the mouse came pouncing upon him, he said, "My fine fellow!" he purred. "I see you in a gray coat this time!" he climbed to the roof of the barn and took the wise old mouse with him.

The mouse began a little, peeping at the cat. "Do you sing?" mewed the cat, looking down on the roof, with one paw on his back.

"I sing at this time of night," answered the mouse. "I should be very glad to have you sing with me."

Pleased Buzz, who was vain, stretched up his neck, as if to look at the barn at the moon, and began to sing.

The wise mouse peeped softly, but was fond of his own voice and with all his might.

He took his paw from the mouse's time.

At the tune was done Buzz looked and saw only a hole in the roof.

A Balancing Trick.

A piece of wood six inches in length and about half an inch in thickness, near one end of it thrust in the blades of two knives in such a way that one of them inclines to the left and the second to the right. The other end of the wood is then placed on the tip of the forefinger. It keeps itself perfectly upright with- out falling, and even if it is inclined to fall it will instantly recover its peculiar position, being in reality equilibrium by the knives.

Historical Questions.

Who was the author of "Hall of Fame"? Joseph Hopkinson. Who was he wrongly said. "He was not kicked into a fight" at Madison.

Who was the "Hero of New Orleans"? Andrew Jackson. Who said, "I'll try, sir"? Colonel Pitt Rivers. Who said "A little more grape, Captain"? General Taylor.

There are times when I think that small the good. German hausfrau has certain fixed rules which are quite well worth quoting.

"Pay cash for everything."
"Do your own buying and marketing."
"Be careful in your selection of food."
"Study out at the beginning of the week just how much you can spend that week."
"Manage your own household; leave nothing to the servants."
"Figure out a system of utilizing all materials. Even the leftovers from a meal can be made into something the next day."
"Do not regard this system of economy as a burden, but as a pleasure and the duty of a wife to her husband."

There's a shopgirl I see downtown at a ribbon counter who has the well dressed look to perfection, yet her clothes are simplicity themselves, differing but little in style from those of the other girls at this counter. They appear conscious of their spotless shirt waists, trim belts and well done coiffures. She seems perfectly unconscious of her grooming. She does not stroke her belt or push it into better fit about her waist every few minutes, or smooth her hair, or fuss with her rings. Everything about her shows pretty taste and care and no present concern with it.

Speaking of shops reminds me of an experience I had recently in a very exclusive decorating establishment. While I was looking over a pile of cretonnes a smart woman, evidently a well known customer, came hurriedly into the shop and asked the salesgirl if she had one of those slipper trees that are made with a metal tip on one end of a steel spring and a wooden knob on the other. An answer in the affirmative being given, the customer ordered just one of the slipper trees to be painted white and prettily decorated and a white powder puff fastened to the toe of it, "so when it lies," she explained, "on my dressing table it will look almost like a slipper with a white pompon on it."

The girl's training was equal to the strain put upon it, and she took the order without questioning its strangeness except with her eyes. Just as the lady reached the door she smiled back at the girl, explaining: "I want it to powder my back with. I can't reach far enough, and the heavy tip at the end of the spring makes the slipper work just right." I therefore made a mental note, "Make some for Christmas gifts." Is it not a stunning idea? So new and original! Goodbye until the letter writing spirit again moves yours devotedly, MABEL.

Recipe for Pumpkin Pie.

Stew pumpkin, cut into small pieces in half pint of water and when soft mash with a potato masher very fine. Let the water dry away, watching closely to prevent burning or scorching. For each pie take one well beaten egg, half cupful sugar, two tablespoonfuls pumpkin, half pint rich milk (a little cream will improve it), a little salt. Stir well together and season with cinnamon or nutmeg. Bake with a good under crust in a hot oven. Some steam the pumpkin instead of stewing it.

Quilting Parties Again the Mode.

Once more the old fashioned quilting is coming back to us, though not with all the elaborations which distinguished this treatment 200 years ago. Then bed covers and many articles of dress were quilted in most minute designs, often most attractive.

Pearls are introduced now at each point of the quilting, and fur is a good addition, and with white and light colored satin, for example, fur is not considered unseasonable, especially sable, when the purse will run to it. Bunches of flowers, animals, birds and fishes found a place in the quiltings of old days, but these are not as yet revived. Many a wedding dress new no longer which could not be worn again found a place as a quilt, most elaborately quilted, and was handed down for generations as an heirloom.

A Country Pot Roast.

In a hot frying pan melt a lump of butter or fry out a small piece of pork. While very hot put in the roast, browning all sides. Roll it over. Do not insert the fork so as to keep all the juice in. When browned put in a pot which has been heated. Put water in the frying pan to get any juice that may have escaped and pour over the meat. Cover closely and cook slowly for three hours, turning occasionally. Keep about a cupful of water under the meat and sprinkle a little flour and salt over it fifteen minutes before taking out. Turn several times.

When Cleaning Globes.

Globes that have become discolored from smoke should be cleaned in the following manner: Soak the globes for about one hour in warm water with soda or borax in it; then add fresh warm water, with a few drops of ammonia, and wash well with a soaped rag. This is better than fannel, as there are generally loose hairs left in fannel unless it is very fine. Polish with a soft linen rag.

Bracelets have been worn from time immemorial, but few wearers of the golden bands of the present day know that they were once used to distinguish the insane. Before lunatics were confined to insane asylums they wore an armband for distinction.

Cyclamen plants are exquisitely pretty with effective leaves and charming little flowers. In an east window with an average amount of water and sunshine they will bloom continually till well in the spring. Then some time the last of April take them out and plant them in the ground, preferably with east exposure, till fall and they will be ready for use and just as pretty the following winter.

Snapdragons in all kinds of glorious colors and shades, including pinks, yellows, rich crimsons and cream whites can be made to bloom from November till well into March. Exposure in a south window agrees with them the best, watering them abundantly, but not recklessly.

Petunias also make splendid winter window plants. The silvery tint pink ones are especially pretty and are cared for in much the same fashion as snapdragons. If the plants appear to droop and grow weary after a month or so of steady blooming they have to be doctored up like any human being after a strain of hard work. Liquid manure has been proved to be most effective as a stimulant and bracer, and a third of a pint given once every ten days or so is the dose. Some people recommend weak coffee as an excellent plant tonic and have great success with their plants in allowing them to absorb it.

Belleville milk dealers have advanced the price of milk to eight cents a quart.

Mr. Manson Stevens had the misfortune to loose one of his freight horses last week. The horse stepped on a nail, which penetrated the coffin joint. Blood poisoning ensued and the animal had to be destroyed.

The Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's extend their hearty thanks to all who so kindly assisted in putting on the two plays in the opera house this week, and also to thank the public for the extremely generous support that was given.

Mr. James A. Vanalstine, east end liveryman, has recently purchased a handsome enclosed carriage, which he intends using for hack purposes, and he will now be in a position to give first-class satisfaction in all hack calls for our townspeople. 50d

The W.C.T.U. wishes to extend their thanks to all who so generously contributed to the rummage sale, which was a financial success. The Union decided to hold another sale next fall, and are desirous that all who may have any articles to donate will please keep them until that time.

The Ontario farmer has a good friend and able exponent of his cause in The Weekly Sun, Toronto. It is good and profitable reading for the thoughtful farmer, and will save him many times the subscription price. There is no other paper just like The Sun. You should read it each week during 1914.

Another sink-hole, presumably caused by quicksand, has been discovered on the new line of the Canadian Northern Railway near Chaffey's Locks. The hole is about twelve feet deep and will delay the running of trains which it was proposed to start this week between Toronto and Ottawa.

Turkey Days.

Last Thursday and Friday were the annual turkey days and an immense amount of turkeys, geese, ducks and chickens were offered to the various buyers. Seven buyers were in the field this year, each looking for a share of the fowl offered. As a result prices reached the highest yet offered, turkeys going as high as 22½¢ for extra choice lots. About $35,000 was paid out by the various buyers. One of the big buyers, who operates in 12 different places made the statement that Napanee was the banner town of Ontario for fowl, more produce being offered here than in the other eleven places he visits put together.

Obituary.

One of the oldest and most respected residents has passed away in the person of Mrs. James Allen, nee Charlotte Johnson. Mrs. Allen was born in the Township of Ernestown in 1834 and was married in 1853 to the late James Allen, who so many years served as Chief of Police in Napanee. Mrs. Allen reached the ripe age of 79 years and passed away quietly at the family residence, Adelphi street, on Friday morning. She was converted to God when but fifteen years of age and very early joined the Methodist Church of which she remained a consistent member until her death. She came with her husband and family to Napanee in 1867 and became a member of Grace Methodist Church. Mrs. Allen has lived a beautiful active Christian life, emulating the example set by the elect women of the churches past history. Grace church gratefully remembers her labors and sacrifices for the cause of Christ. Nearly all of her generation have crossed the "great divide." Though very few knew her in the years of her activities yet the story of her sweet solicitude for the welfare and success of the church of her choice has been transmitted to the present generation. The official board of the church sent a beautiful wreath of flowers in honor of her memory. The large concourse of the first citizens of Napanee who attended the service told of the place she held in the esteem of her townspeople and immediate neighbors. Another of those sterling characters has thus passed away from our community who helped to lay the moral foundations of our people. It was a splendid generation of won souls. She leaves to mourn her loss one daughter, Helen, one grandson, Russell, and two brothers, one living in Chicago and the other at Grand Forks, Oregon. Her husband and an only son and one daughter, Emma, predeceased her. The funeral service was conducted at the house by the Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of Grace Church, assisted by Rev. A. W. Stuart of Montreal conference a near relative of the family. The interment took place at Morven where she sleeps beside her husband awaiting the resurrection of the just.
